Mission Statement

At its core Tales From Gloom Hollow is a supernatural Urban Fantasy story taking place in an alternate timeline closely resembling our modern world. While we intend to explore many genres our story most closely resembles Cosmic/Survival Horror and Mystery. Our goal is not to necessarily kill your characters but to create a dynamic storytelling environment in which you are free to express yourself, through character creation, action, and agency. Creating drama that stirs character growth and evolution is a top priority. This is an 18+ game, 16-17 are permitted to attend if accompanied by a participating guardian.

Player Expectations and Community Guidelines

During your stay with us you will

- Not reference to real life politics in game
- If someone makes a reference to a real world religion you will not make fun of it
- Respect the diversity of those around you, we will not tolerate discrimination based on race, sex, age, religion, sexual orientation and gender expression.
- Respect the gender identity and pronouns of another, if corrected rectify your previous error and move on
- Always ask for consent when touching someone else, state specifically what you want to do and get an enthusiastic yes, and at that point you may touch the person only in a way that you specified.
- No means no, and that is the end of the discussion, drop the topic immediately
- Respect the playstyles of others, no one way of LARPing is for everyone
- Be aware of your own limitations, take care of yourself physically, with food, water, rest etc, and emotionally. If you need to leave a scene do so, there is no shame in this. Also never react negatively to others doing so. Note this will not be used to escape consequences, be sure to talk to the other parties about how this should be handled and if necessary involve a Director.
- Do not interrupt a scene to correct someone on mechanics, if it's an immediate concern like misunderstanding a combat ability, simply state "Clarification, this skill does this" or better yet pull them aside later or ask a Staff member to do so. When clarifying, be aware of your tone, this is a weekend event and we can all be stressed at times but rule clarifications should never result in a dispute.
- Any sort of Romantic RP needs to be discussed and agreed upon before game.

- We prefer CVC (Character vs Character) rather than PVP (Player vs Player), this is an important distinction as we want conflict to stay between characters instead of between players. You don't have to be friends but we'd like you all to be civil.
- No Alcohol or drugs will be allowed on site.
- No bullying of any form will be tolerated
- No harassment of staff will be tolerated
- No complaining or bad mouthing of other LARP events in our game space is allowed

Staff Layout

Every member of staff should be available to help with overseeing Combat CVC or clarifying Rules.

Crew - these come in a few variations.

Operations Crew, who help run the game during their NPC shift. They coordinate the NPCs and mods, only one per shift (most of the time) but they will be assisted by a Storyteller or Director.

Logistics Crew, who man the General Store during their NPC shift. They take care of writing cards for production/gathering, processing, buying, and selling from the Market, as well as any function the General Store has that weekend.

Last is Makeup/Costuming Crew, who oks and puts together costumes before a mod is sent out and applies any makeup/prosthetics needed.

Storyteller - This person writes the mods and story of any given game, during their NPC shift they will accompany Lore heavy mods into the field.

Director of Conflict Resolution: Ridley

World Lore

Tales from Gloom Hollow takes place in a world much like our own. The borders on the map haven't changed, countries, continents, and cultures remain familiar. But public history took a quiet turn in the early 1990s.

With the rise of the internet, secrecy became harder to maintain. At first, the videos were dismissed, glitches, hoaxes, urban legends. But the evidence mounted, and denial became impossible. Supernatural creatures were real. And as if to confirm it, children began to be born with abilities that defied reason. Magic, long relegated to myth, had returned.

Panic followed. In the chaos, an organization long operating in the shadows stepped into the light.

Section 4, the global safeguard against the unknown. Backed by major governments, they claimed a single mission: to protect humanity and uncover the origins of these new anomalies, both magical and monstrous.

Over the decades, opinions on magic fractured. Some saw it as a gift, others as a threat. The general public, kept at a safe distance from the truth, still doesn't know what the creatures truly are, or where they come from. Attacks are rare enough to be ignored by most. Daily life continues, though more people glance over their shoulder at night.

Now, Section 4 is no longer the only power on the field.

- The Brimstone Assembly, ideological iconoclasts who fight for equality for all, they believe magic is the key to freedom.
 - The Circle, a college for magic and the arcane that hopes to lend their expertise to better understand the mysteries of Gloom Hollow.
 - The Chevalier, America's oldest monster-hunting society, has assembled in full, ready to protect humankind from monsters.
 - The Meridian Corporation, wielding supernatural tech and wondrous medicine for civilian use.
- The Hollow Society, a rising grassroots investigative group, seeks to drag every secret into the daylight, no matter the risk.

Whether for betterment of the planet or monetary gain over the years these factions have worked together to prevent crises and uncover the source of these anomalies.

Town Lore

The following information is known only to a select few who've visited Gloom Hollow.

In 1850, the Kronbach family, wealthy industrialists with deep pockets and lofty ambitions, founded a mining town in California's Pauma Valley. Gold had been discovered in the surrounding hills, and the town of Gloom Hollow sprang to life almost overnight. A booming workforce flooded in, drawn by the promise of fortune beneath the earth. The large workforce got to work bringing the vast quantities of gold to the surface. But the deeper the miners dug, the stranger things became.

First came the disappearances. Then, disturbing reports: inhuman sounds echoing from the lower tunnels, shadows that moved against the light, whispers that weren't carried by any wind. Eventually, the missing men returned, but they were no longer men. They were twisted, mutated creatures, maddened by something ancient buried in the stone.

The source? A newly unearthed element later named Umbracite, shards of an obsidian-like mineral believed to be fragments of Tezcatlipoca's shattered mirror. Exposure to it warped flesh and mind alike.

The Kronbachs acted quickly. They sealed the mines, called in a covert organization known as The Trust, and purged the town of all remaining witnesses. Survivors were experimented on, and the mutated were captured for study. In time, The Trust buried the entire incident, scrubbing records, destroying evidence, and vanishing into the dark.

Years later, The Trust fractured. One splinter faction modernized and monetized their discoveries, becoming the Meridian Corporation, a now-infamous name in arcane technology and scientific research.

By the 1950s, a handful of drifters and opportunists had returned to the abandoned town and begun rebuilding. But in recent years, the town has experienced an inexplicable surge in population. Strangers from across the globe have begun appearing out of nowhere, no idea how they got there, but all drawn by the same inexplicable force.

Maybe you've seen things before, strange lights, impossible creatures, waking dreams. Maybe you're already a member of one of the Six Factions. Or maybe this is your first step into the unknown.

It happens differently for everyone. You were walking to your car, taking the subway, or turning down a familiar street. when the world around you twisted. Shapes blurred. Sound died. And for a moment, you saw nothing, nothing but a smooth, dark void with a faint mirror-glow.

You found yourself at the edge of a quiet town: a lone gas station, an old diner, or the welcome sign flickering in the dusk. However you arrived, you were greeted by the same figure, a bus driver. He didn't seem surprised to see you. You asked where you were. He pointed toward the town square.

“Welcome to Gloom Hollow, California,” he said. “You’re right on time.

Ad Fect Lore

Ad Fect first contacted Earth in the year 2022

Ad Fect is a world caught between memory and momentum, a land shaped by divine hands, scarred by ancient catastrophe, and now teetering on the edge of something new.

This realm belongs, in name if not in governance, to the Triple Faced Goddess Itzpapalotl, a celestial being of terrible beauty and unknowable purpose. She once ruled openly, her will enforced by the Fae, her radiant protectors, who patrolled the skies and the borders of reality itself. The Fae were immortal, graceful, and bound to the sacred Wards of the Four Seasons.

Long ago, legend tells, a flood of divine proportions consumed the world. Land vanished beneath endless waves, and time nearly ended. But as the waters slowly receded, life returned in unexpected forms. From the still-wet earth and drifting islands emerged three intelligent species:

- The Fae, still cling to their ritualistic ways, spellwork and steel, magic and mysticism avoiding modern progress in favor of ancient tradition.
- The Elves, elementally empowered, built sprawling solar cities that shimmer like glass reefs across the recovering archipelago. Attuned to nature, they flourish in gleaming towers powered by sun and aura.
- And far beneath, hidden in the deep parts of the oceans, the enigmatic Xolopods migrate in small and large processions.

For the Fae, upheaval has come from within. With their sacred seasonal wards shattered, their ageless bodies have begun to wither with time. But amid the mourning came a miracle: Itzpapalotl returned. She has not reclaimed her throne, nor spoken her will directly, but her presence alone has renewed the Fae's resolve..

Once thought to be a reclusive aquatic race, the Xolopod have surged back into the world above. Some who rise are those who wave the flag of the Adherents of the Leviathan, a militant sect devoted to a rumored sea-god. These Xolopod strike in the night, raiding coastal towns, seizing prisoners, and whispering of the Leviathan. Though a minority among their species, their impact has been chilling, entire communities left silent in their wake. Other more peaceful Xolopods come to the surface looking to escape the Adherents or to engage in trade.

Now, as new alliances form and old empires tremble, Ad Fect finds itself at a crossroads. Faith, technology, and tradition collide. The waves ripple across the world again, not of water this time, but of war, revelation, and gods walking once more among mortals.

Gaian Lore

Gaia first contacted Earth in the year 2023

The citizens of Gaia originate from a world called Tamoanchan, the once thriving hyper advanced human world was crippled almost overnight by the Tamoanchan Curse, or T Curse. This virulent affliction ravaged the world, turning everyday people into vicious monsters called Crawlers.

Desperate for solutions an initiative was started with two impossible goals: first find a cure and second ferry the survivors to a new world, untouched by the Curse. A cure was found, with complications. It changed the molecular composition of the survivors, splitting humanity into one of three divergent species.

- The Hematophages, who now required aura to survive.
- The Nagual, animal-human hybrids
- And The Werebeasts, who look human but could shift into a fully bestial form at will.

To escape the doomed planet, the five largest corporations built colossal Arks, each a floating city of their own with all the amenities required for a long voyage. Soon the ships left the planet, carrying millions of souls who could afford the price of passage. But even then they could not escape the T-curse which evolved to infect the survivors. Twisting portions of the Nagual population into Stalkers, some Vampires into Strigoi, and Werebeats into Satyr. If things weren't bad enough Crawlers had also snuck aboard the ships, resulting in fierce fighting in the limited space and twisting halls. One Ark was even lost, overrun with horrors and sabotaged by ———.

Eventually a planet was discovered which would later be named Gaia. The ships plotted a course and landed on the new world. Colonization began at once, establishing several Megacities with a wasteland between them, teeming with Crawlers and worse. The 4 corporations established their rule forming the Tribunal, a board of sorts composed of the 4 CEOs and one Chairperson.

This Tribunal now oversees the lives of millions of Gaians. Acting as a government while the individual companies still peddle their wares, extracting every Credit of money they can from their subjects. The regime is brutal, using their Enforcers to put down protests and riots with extreme violence and terror tactics. While the people of Gaia do their best to survive, the T-Curse still lurks at the edges of their cities, ready to finish what it started.

All the while Xipe Totec, the flayed god, slowly reveals himself to those wayward souls.

Kur Lore

Kur first contacted Earth in the year 2024

Kur is a world under siege, a wounded realm that cries out for justice.

It belongs, in sacred name, to Tlaloc, the god of water, storms, and life's endless cycle. For as long as memory stretches, three great peoples carved their existence into its surface.

- The Orcs, fierce and proud, who roamed the endless plains atop their Strider mounts.
- The Dwarves, stoic and indomitable, who carved empires within the heart of mountains.
- The Goblins, cunning and swift, who made the deep forests their home.

In ancient times, these three species warred. For glory and for survival. Land, food, vengeance; any slight could ignite generations of blood feuds. Yet no tribe ever rose strong enough to conquer the other two. Balance, brutal though it was, endured.

Until it all changed. Fire rained from the heavens in a storm of ruin, sundering cities and turning proud kingdoms into dust. In the chaos that followed, the very fabric between worlds tore apart, and from these gaping wounds the demons of Xibalba surged forth.

Where mortals saw devastation, demons saw opportunity. They descended on Kur like a plague, carving out the living spirit of the land itself, poisoning its leylines, snuffing out its guardian spirits, and spreading rot through every stone and stream. The surviving Orcs, Goblins, and Dwarves were rounded up and thrown into brutal labor camps known as the Pits, each one carefully engineered to cultivate the emotions demons feed upon.

But in their cruelty, the demons miscalculated. Forced to live together in squalor and sorrow, the three peoples began to see one another not as enemies, but as kin. They took the name their captors spat at them "the Drudge" and made it their own.

And when the time came, they rose up. Led by three great Matrons, one from each species, the Drudge burst from their chains in a tide of fury. Escaping from the pits in mass. They founded fledgling city-states amid the ruins of the old world. The oldest of these, Cahpkatuk, has stood defiant for nearly three centuries, a beacon of stubborn life in a land still haunted by darkness.

Yet the war was far from over. The demons retaliated with unholy rage, razing Drudge settlements, ambushing migrating bands, and dragging survivors back to the Pits. For centuries, Kur was caught in an endless cycle of rebuilding and ruin.

Hope, however, endures. Fifty years ago, a group of powerful Grand Seers gathered at the withered remains of Kur's dead leylines. They pooled what scraps of magic still lingered, performing a ritual so perilous that many believed it was suicide. Against all odds, they succeeded, tearing open a passage to the Eternal Grotto, a mythic crossroads that connected all worlds and possibilities, in hopes of finding allies who might help them break the chains of their world.

Recently, Drudge Pathfinders stumbled across the strange settlement of Gloom Hollow, a town whose own history is steeped in secrets. A tentative friendship bloomed between the Drudge and the citizens of Gloom Hollow. But the demons are always watching. Their gaze has now turned upon the Hollow, and their hunger grows.

The Drudge know that mere survival is no longer enough. The old world is dying. Now they must revive it, with fire, blood, and the will to endure. Freedom must no longer be a dream.

The Eternal Grotto Lore

Excerpt from a Section 4 Dossier by Dr. Soto.

The Eternal Grotto has long been a source of fascination and wild speculation, but only recently have we started to truly grasp what we're dealing with. At its core, the Grotto appears to be a kind of connective tissue between worlds. Just how many it links is still unknown, but so far we've made contact with Ad Fect, Gaia, Kur, and Xibalba. Most have been willing to cooperate, Xibalba has not.

Travel between these worlds is considerably easier through the Grotto, as space travel is still being developed, but it's no simple matter. The landscape shifts constantly, reshaping itself over time. Without a Kurian Grotto Compass, navigation is difficult. Even so, permanent facilities have been established. Groups like The Tribunal and the Jotunn Company have carved out footholds, eager to strip resources from the Grotto and discover its secrets.

The route from Earth to Ad Fect is now well-traveled, lined with outposts and stabilized zones that make it relatively safe. Getting to Kur or Gaia is riskier, there's less infrastructure, and the path is stalked by monsters. We've started to piece together that many of the creatures from our myths Barghests, Leshen, Imps, Harpies, and more didn't just come from stories. They came from the Grotto.

The biggest revelation about the Eternal Grotto, though, came with its origin. Researchers now believe it was created entirely by accident, a side effect of a sleeping entity known as Cipactli. According to the most credible findings, Cipactli shifted in its slumber, rolled over, and in doing so cracked reality wide open, birthing the Grotto.

It's safe to say, keeping Cipactli asleep is in everyone's best interest.

Xibalba Lore

Xibalba first contacted Earth in the year 2025

The homeworld of Demonkind, a blighted world of fire, steel, and decay orbiting a subdued dying star.

What was once a verdant plane has become the pulsing heart of an industrial war machine. Every cityscape belches smoke from soul-fed furnaces. Oceans have boiled into clouds. Mountains have been torn down to forge weapons and war machines. The skies are red with volcanic haze and crawling with great airships and infernal dreadnoughts, their hulls stitched together from damned flesh and hex-bound steel. It's lands are soaked in the run off from industry and rivers of blood and pus, a stark reminder of the Demon's influence.

The Usurper Gods: the Deceiver and the Jailer

Once among the divine pantheon, The Deceiver and The Jailer turned away from the Six Houses of the Gods. The Gods, obsessed with maintaining "cycles" through destruction and rebirth, sanctioned apocalypses, extinctions, and the erasure of entire peoples in the name of the divine order.

The Deceiver and the Jailer called it murder. For this defiance, they were exiled and nearly destroyed. But they survived. And in Xibalba, they built their empire, not for peace, or justice, not for their own glory, but for revenge.

They do not seek to restore balance or save the universe. They seek to burn El Dorado the, Golden City and seat of the gods, to ash and raise their own throne from its cinders.

The Hierarchy of Demonkind

Demon society is brutal, hierarchical, and fueled by capturing souls and conquest. Each tier exists to serve the next, all bound in contract to the will of the Usurpers. When a demon's physical form is defeated they do not die, at least not permanently. Instead their souls return to Xibalba where their body is recrafted in the forges.

- Lesser Demons – Born of Xibalba's hellforges, these creatures are shaped by cruel magic and forged from vengeance, pestilence, and the anger of their creators. They are the foot soldiers and laborers of the Demon war machine.
- Greater Demons – Once mortal, now corrupted. These beings made pacts with Demonkind. Some for power, others through trickery, and some out of desperation. Their morality is gone, replaced by infernal power.
- The Divine – Chosen from the most powerful Greater Demons, Divines are gifted with demonic blessings by The Deceiver or the Jailer. They serve as warlords, heralds, and living weapons for their chosen Gods.

- Demon Lords – Ten in number, each a walking catastrophe. These are ancient Divines who have claimed entire sectors of Xibalba for their own and command legions of Demons. Their names are feared even among their own kind.
- The Usurper Gods – the Deceiver and the Jailer rule from the Forge Throne, an infernal spire that scrapes the upper atmosphere of Xibalba. They are wrath given form. They remember every slight, every lost soul, every moment of betrayal at the hands of the gods and they wait patiently for their time to strike.

Divine Immunity

One of the most dangerous truths about Demonkind is this:
The power of the gods doesn't work on them.

When The Deceiver and the Jailer broke from the pantheon, they did more than declare war, they rewrote the rules of crafting their followers. The Demons were forged in rebellion, their very essence crafted to defy divine intervention. The will of the Gods has no effect on them.

Soul Economy and Infernal Industry

Mortals fear Demonkind for a reason. They consume souls, not just for sustenance, but as currency, fuel, and raw material. Xibalban furnaces are powered by bound screaming souls. Weapons are etched with the names of the damned, lending power with each swing.

Elemental motes, rare pieces of divine essence, are used to bind machinery to will, to fuel Demon Engines, and to anchor portals between worlds. They are stolen from Elves and harvested from dying leylines.

Factories stretch from horizon to horizon, overseen by sadistic foremen and policed by flying horrors. Everything is built for war. Everything burns.

Xibalba's Reach

Demonkind are no longer confined to their hellish world. They have ships, gateways, and agents scattered across the Grotto and beyond. Their corruption seeps into politics, dreams, and rituals.

They whisper into mortal ears, offering power, knowledge, vengeance, and immortality, always at a cost. Always with fine print. Each soul claimed brings them closer to their goal: the death of the gods.

Demonkind's Ultimate Purpose

The goal of Demonkind is clear, simple, and absolute:

Destroy the Golden City. Shatter the divine cycle. Replace the gods with those who earned divinity through suffering.

If they must defile a thousand worlds to make it happen, so be it.

Building a Character

The next section will cover all known Species, Attributes, Skills, and Classes available to you in the world of Gloom Hollow. Upon character creation, you'll receive your first class free along with 16 starting experience points. Each game you will gain 4xp, you can pay for 2 extra at $10 or 20 fate points a piece, this must be done at the start of game. A second and third class can be learned for 10xp each. Like Skills, learning a class requires a trainer who possesses the desired Class.

You will also receive 10+D10 in the currency of the game known as Horn.

Each Playable Species has two associated numbers with their attributes. For example, humans have Strength - 2 (6) the number outside of parentheses is the starting attribute value while the number inside parentheses is the maximum attribute value the race can acquire.

Our recommendation is to pick your character's species, class, skills, Advantages and Disadvantages, and then Faction.

Playable Species

Humans - “The Reclaimed/Stolen”

Health: 8 Aura: 10 Soul: 3

Weight: 2

Wit - 3 (10) Finesse - 2 (8) Strength - 2 (6) Constitution - 2 (6) - Spirit - 3 (10)

It's a human. You may know them.

Modifications: Humans will receive all of the following

Adrenaline Rush - Can be used once per 12s. Upon declaration of "Adrenaline" the user gains one free use of each of the following skills; Evade, Flee, Pursue, and Perception, these skills can be used within the span of ten minutes.

Hearsay: You can purchase Rumor Monger for 4xp even if it is not on your Class list, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less

Nurture - Humans are born similar but can differ drastically depending on life experiences or education. Choose two different Attributes to gain +1 to.

Trump Card - At character creation gain access to purchase one skill, not on your classlist and not a magic spell, that you can learn for 6xp as long as you meet the prerequisites on one of your class lists. The skill does not need to be learned immediately, this skill is self taught.

Work Smart Not Hard - Once per 6s you may reduce the craft, gather or build time of one action by 50%. This reduction is calculated after any other reductions in time, i.e. a farmer using a pitchfork.

Last Stand: Human Version

You can take 10 unhindered stumbling steps (Don't hurt yourself) in any direction then fall to the ground in bleedout.

Costuming Requirements:

Humans are the easiest race to costume as since I think most of you are one? Remember that the setting is modern-day and think about what kind of life your character has, and then dress appropriately.

Stitches - “The Anomaly”

Health: 11 Aura: 8 Soul: 2

Weight: 2

Wit - 3 (10) Finesse 1 (6) - Strength - 3 (8) Constitution - 3 (10) - Spirit - 2 (6)

Artificial beings constructed by the Warlocks of the Paranormal Research Division of Section 4 to investigate the scope of magic and its potential implications on immortality. Stitches are created using a combination of magic, science, and the remains of several “recently” departed sentient beings. They have their own soul and consciousness, with only faint recollections of the people who were used to create them, blurry memories of faces and places they've never met or visited and may feel no attachment to.

All Stitches are either hunted or, at the least, observed by Section 4 or working for them as an agent; as a result, Stitches try their utmost to conceal their identity and lineage. Fortunately, they pass as humans, with the one clue being the distinctive stitches covering their body.

Because of their origins, Stitches are hesitant to trust others easily.

Currently, all new Stitches can be composed of only Human, Elf, Fae, Werebeast, Vampire, Nagual and Drudge parts.

Modifications: Stitches will receive the following

Aura Vision - All Stitches possess the ability to see Aura, at any time you may ask a player or NPC their current Aura, except for combat, this must be answered truthfully. You can also function as a conduit to transport Aura from one person to another by paying 1 Aura for each Aura moved; all three parties must be willing. You may also transfer Aura from yourself to another by paying 2 Aura for each 1 Aura transferred.

Esoteric - You can purchase Dead Drop for 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

Mismatched: All stitches are designed to accommodate Section 4. The scientists and Warlocks that made them also sought to ensure that Stitches would break down without upkeep.

As a result, the Stitch body's design promotes structural degradation.

All stitches must be maintained twice every weekend: once in the first half of the game (Friday to noon Saturday) and again in the second half (noon Saturday to noon Sunday).

A Stitch has to find someone to aid them as they can't do it alone. This encounter necessitates a single use of the First Aid skill. (This must be noted on your sheet.) If Stitches are not maintained in the first half of the game, they will instantly get the Cleave effect on all of their limbs; if Stitches are not maintained in the second half of the game, they will return to the following game with the Cleave effect on all limbs. Alternatively, a Stitch can devour three Arcane Ashes or one Arcane Crystal, which will cover the Stitches' upkeep for the whole weekend.

Overbearing Creators: You are either kept on a short leash working for the Section 4's PRD or are being actively observed.

An Assortment Of Parts - During character creation, you can choose one of the following organs from this list to be transplanted into your character. Afterwards, this can easily be replaced in game with the medical skill Transplant. Each organ will have an item card with a 12 month expiration and note any abilities they provide. You may have a maximum of two Transplanted Organs within you at a time.

Part	Effect
Echoes of the Past - Human Basal Ganglia	The memories of the human mind grant you the skills of a previous life. While implanted with a Human Basal Ganglia you have access to the listed skill at 0xp cost. If you are implanted with a Basal Ganglia that does not have a listed skill choose one from the list below. Once chosen the skill cannot be changed on the item card. Archery, Battle Buddy, Bind, Breach Basic, Check Up, Combat Drill, Deception, Explosives Basic, Fill in the Gaps, First Aid, Forestry Advanced, Incognito, Intercept Basic, Intimidate, Interrogate, Investigate, Light Armor, Long Firearms Basic, Maintenance, Medical Basic, Melee Small, Mining Advanced, Perform, Pickpocket, Sense Poison, Scholar, Small Firearms Basic, Sneak Basic, Study, Teaching, Therapy, Throwing, Torture, Transportation Basic, Unarmed, or one spell from any Basic Magic Types (Even if you don't possess the Magically Inclined Advantage).
Vigor - Elf Lungs	You're partly an Elf and hence have a little of their Vigor. You can choose one of the 6s, Saturday 6am, Saturday 6pm, or Sunday 6am and regenerate your Aura at that time in addition to the normal 12s. This must be chosen during character creation or when it is transplanted into you; you cannot select a different 6s at each event.
Gift of Flight - Fae Wings	Once per Hour, and for 4 Aura, you may raise one of your arms, point upward and declare "Flight!". you can take an endless amount of these steps. These wings must be phys-repped.

	Flight rules are as follows; while your hand is raised you enter another zone of combat, meaning you cannot melee others on the ground, or under the ground, and they cannot melee you. You however can melee others who are flying. You can be targeted by ranged weapons or spells from anyone. You may fly for up to five minutes before you must land.
Law of the Jungle - Nagual Appendages	With Nagual Appendages implanted into you you gain access to the animalistic abilities of the Nagual. Choose up to 4 points of abilities from “The Kingdom” which will be marked on the organ item card. Once chosen the abilities cannot be changed.. These abilities are lost if the Nagual Appendages are removed or degraded. If you obtain new Nagual Appendages, you will be able to choose new skills from "The Kingdom".
Body of Steel - AI Port	You’ve been transplanted with a port for a single slot A.I. Component. You may swap out Modules as per the AI Top of the Line ability.
Heart of the Beast - Werebeast Heart	Choose one of the following, activate it once per 12s for 15 minutes, this is known as Lesser Beast Form When the Werebeast Heart is transplanted onto you, you can pick which ability you'll gain. This chosen ability remains constant throughout events. This ability is lost if the Werebeast Heart is removed or degraded. You cannot perform a spell to heal yourself; and if a spell is cast, it must be completed within the 10 seconds.

Costuming Requirements:

Stitches resemble humans except for their namesake stitches. These can be simply recreated using black eyeliner and setting spray, but you are welcome to go above and beyond with items such as tattoo paper or special effects cosmetics.

As a general rule, stitches dress conservatively with little flesh showing and always cover their stitches; in the case of facial stitches, they will wear masks around persons they do not trust.

They prefer large jackets, loose clothes, gloves, and boots.

Chaos Elves - “The Chosen”

Health: 6 Aura: 12 Soul: 3

Weight: 1

Wit - 3 (10) - Finesse - 3 (10) - Strength - 1 (6) - Constitution - 2 (6) - Spirit - 3 (8)

Elves hail from the world under the Fourth Sun, also known as Ad Fect. A lush world of many extreme environmental conditions. Much of its history has been lost due to an apocalyptic flood many millennia ago that wiped out nearly all life on the planet.

Elves live on a series of archipelagos, called the Isle surrounding a large Pangea-like continent.

These island chains run the gauntlet of temperatures and biomes. When a Chaos Elf finally understands their true self they undergo the Ritual of Joining, the result of which turns a Chaos Elf into a living embodiment of one of the five elements. Once a Chaos Elf has been chosen by an Element they begin the journey to that area of the archipelago, starting a new life with others like them. These types are as follows; Bracken Elves, who are allied with plantlife and the rocks and soil. Hearth Elves who are allied with fire. Tide Elves, allied with water in all of its forms including ice. Levin Elves allied with storms and electricity. And last being the Zephyr Elves allied with the gusts and wind. While the elves of different elements live apart they tend to work together but sometimes have minor disagreements. These problems are always solved diplomatically and have never resulted in violence.

Their technology is slightly more advanced than humanity's, by about 20 years or so. It has followed a more planet friendly path with a focus on natural energy and sustainability. Each elemental area functions like a city-state with elected Elders representing each of the 5 city-states. These cities rival even the largest cities of Earth. Life in these cities is generally peaceful as the Elves have done their best to distance themselves from conflict. But try as they may, conflict still finds them.

As stated earlier Elves live on island chains thus avoiding the main continent, this is because of the former war waged by the Fae of the Seelie and Unseelie Courts. Elves didn't know why the conflict was fought and nor did they care, preferring to keep to themselves. This all changed when the Cult of Mirrors attacked the Fae Season Wards and destroyed them, ending Fae immortality forever. Now Elves and Fae are close allies, trying to rebuild their broken world.

But the Adherents of the Leviathan are not bound by such ideas. They are a small minority of the third species on the planet, the water dwelling Xolopod. They launch raids on Elven cities, taking captives and dragging these poor victims back with them to the deep.

Elven attempts at isolation changed when the Jottun Corporation of Earth discovered a way into the Eternal Grotto and found the door to Ad Fect. Jottun took samples from everything they encountered including the flora and fauna of the planet and the Elves themselves. These Elves were tested on, the results of which produced the super soldiers known today as the Mardrom.

While the Elves are unsure of their role in the grand scheme of things they are more than ready to find out. Many Elves have chosen to move to Earth, integrating themselves into the various paranormal factions and establishing the city of New Ad Fect.

The Elves have their own understanding of magic that differs from Humanity's. Humans craft lyrics, songs, and poems, as a way to commune with or command these strange forces. This in effect is why magic was first discovered by poets and musicians.

Elves on the other hand, view the entire world as alive, the rocks, trees, water, all of it, is alive and teeming with magic. A common saying in Chaos Elf Culture is In Lak'ech, which means I am another you, just as you are another me. What we call Aura the Elves refer to as Camay, which roughly translates to essence. They seek to respect all around them and their magic manifests in the way of requests. Symbols have been passed down since their great flood and it's with these Elves craft instructions or orders. These symbols collectively are referred to as The Code of Creation. For example, the main way Elven magic is used is with objects referred to as Wak'a. These objects are made of metal as these minerals are the only things in existence that aren't alive. A perfect blank slate to create from.

On these objects the Elves use The Code of Creation to imbue magic into the objects themselves. The symbols on a gauntlet may translate to "flying ember" this effectively creates what we would refer to as a fireball spell.

Because of the power involved with The Code of Creation only a select chosen symbols are known to the general populace.

Even with this understanding of magic the Elves have shown themselves to be fast learners of Humanities' method, with some among them even mastering these techniques even though we've only been in contact for a few short years.

An average Elf's lifespan is 1000 years. But PC Elves are only allowed to be up to age 300 at character creation.

Modifications:

Erudite - You can purchase one Expertise for free at character creation even if it's not on your Class list.

This grants them immunity to damage of their element but weak, (meaning they take double damage) to one other.

When casting the spell True Enchantment you count as a mote of your own element.

Wak'a - Every Elven Family has their own magic item passed down generations. These items are metal objects that are inscribed with symbols of "The Code of Creation", these symbols determine the effect. These objects can be rings, statuettes, bracelets, etc. A small metal object basically. You may choose one of these items to start with, depending on your element. You may be attuned to one Wak'a of your Element every 12s, meaning that if you have multiple you may choose to attune to a different one at the start of a 12s. If a Wak'a requires casting it's verbalized as whatever elf type it is, for example "Verse of Hearth". If you are effected by a Wak'a it can be Willpowered.

Cosmic Elves - “The Veiled”

The Cosmic elves of Atl'thea have developed a society steeped in ritual, cosmic study, and dark magic. Cosmic elves combine reverence for the celestial guidance with an unyielding commitment to scholarly pursuits, especially in the arcane arts. As a result, their cities feature astral observatories, sacred amphitheaters, and ritual sites aligned with the stars. Structures feature prominent pipe-work that brings central heating, indoor plumbing and heated-irrigation thanks to geothermal activity hidden beneath the capital. Many dwellings are decorated in metalwork details with both glyph-like carvings and grand sculptures that blend natural and cosmic symbols, honoring the stars and warning of the ever-present threat of the void. Intricate features that bind Atl'thean Elves to their Cosmic purpose on their homeworld.

Collectivist in nature, Cosmic elf society is governed by the people. Guided by a council of mages, artisans, warriors and scholars whose collaborative guilds form the civic order known as the Astral Council. Their duties center on interpreting the will of the people and translating the celestial signs that appear through focus ritual, deliberately steered states of creative flow believed to contain guidance from the stars. These guild members of diverse skill act conduits for creative flow; calculating, forging, crafting, writing. Whatever their chosen medium. After their work and dedications are complete, guilds work together to decode & share knowledge for recording and practice, strengthening their collective focus.

Atl'thean society is reminiscent of a late Renaissance or Hellenistic era of Earth, with a heavy focus on Arts & Science. Atl'thean culture enjoys advanced understanding of navigation, celestial positioning, metalworking, and agriculture. Elven technological advancements blend with high magic making for a pre-industrial world empowered and fortified by high-magic disciplines such as chronomancy and dark elemental magic, adaptations that let them harmonize with their cosmic environment. The ability to tune into the veil of darkness and manipulate the fabric of their surrounding space is woven into their everyday life, providing both physical and spiritual strength. Their society stresses the strength and power birthed from darkness, the shared experience of thriving in the shadow while impressing the importance of everyone's talents having value; each individual thread lending strength to the dark tapestry of fate.

Modifications:

Dark Vision: You can purchase Perception for 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list. If it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

Elemental Attunement, Cosmic: Cosmic elves are born in harmony with the impossibly dark, star-scattered veil of space. Immune to damage from Dark modifier/Weak to (takes double damage from) Void. For any effect that requires the use of an Elemental Mote you count as a mote of your own element.

When casting the spell True Enchantment you count as a mote of your own element.

Perfect Vigor - Regenerates Aura every 6 hours instead of every 12s like all other non-elf, 12am Saturday, 6am Saturday, 12pm Saturday, 6pm Saturday, 12am Sunday, 6 am Sunday.

Ritual Focus - Cosmic Elves are adept at finding the most efficient way to conduct magic. When leading rituals, spells that require a schematic, and multi-participant spells. Cosmic Elves may reduce the cost of the Ritual by 2 aura per participant, minimum 2 participants. Amount reduced cannot exceed half of the aura required.

Ceiba [SAY·buh] - Ritual tools known as Ceiba, are important for personal spellcraft as well as communal ritual. These items are carved, charcoal-black wood, and come in many wearable or hand-held forms such as; pendants, carved statuettes, painted talismans, wands and others. Cosmic elves may choose one of these items from the Cosmic Elf list to start with. You may be attuned to one Ceiba (or Wak'a) of your Element every 12s, meaning that if you have multiple you may choose to attune to a different one at the start of a 12s. Any advantages or disadvantages that would affect Elven Wak'a would also affect Ceiba. If a Ceiba requires casting it's verbalized as whatever elf type it is, for example "Verse of Cosmic". If you are affected by a Ceiba it can be Willpowered.

Cosmic Elf Ceiba list:

Sign of the Night Veil: With this item you may change the Damage of your weapons, melee or ranged, to Dark anytime you wish.

Vortex Pull: Once per combat you may Gesture at an enemy and declare "Pull 10" during which they are immune to damage and effects.

Naming Conventions: "Space" or "Darkness" related first name with compound last name. Such as: Lumi Darkstar or Nova Shadowveil.

Cosmic/Atl'thean Costuming Requirements:

Elf ears are required, with galaxy markings painted across the nose and cheeks, tipping the ears or creating a mask around the eyes or if you have tactile issues you can wear sleeves or leggings with space patterns. Contact lenses are optional and can also replace make-up, but it should be clear that your elf has been chosen by the cosmic dark.

Much like their Chaos-elemental cousins from Ad Fect, Atl'thean or Cosmic Elves dress to represent their embodied element: cosmic darkness, as illustrated by the star-tattered veil of space. Costuming should be Renaissance-Era enhanced by magic and clockwork machinery, drawing from themes of deep space, shadow, stars and powerful celestial bodies. Think ritual garb or practical combat tunics with dark or voidbeast scale leather accessories and layered fabrics. Most common are dark fabrics (blues, purples, charcoal greys and black) and accessories with glowing or star-shaped accents evoking starlight or orbital patterns. Other accessories include craft tools, metalwork jewelry and masks or dark veil face coverings.

VARIANT SPECIES NOTE: With backstory approval, you may choose to roll a new character as a recently ejected Atl'thean, a cosmic elf that has been thrust from their homeworld culture, plucked up and sent to Gloom Hollow through a temporal anomaly– OR as any type of existing Ad Fect (Elementless or Chaos Element) elf you are eligible to submit a Personal Plot Request to be transformed into a Cosmic (Dark Element) elf that can integrate bits of the culture into their existing kit while adjusting to embody the new element. Transformation requires soul loss to take place during the PPR.

Fae - “The Dyad”

Health: 11 Aura: 8 Soul: 3

Weight: 3

Wit - 2 (6) - Finesse - 2 (8) - Strength - 2 (6) - Constitution - 3 (10) - Spirit - 3 (10)

The Fae of the Four Seasons of the world of Ad Fect were created for one purpose, to be the harbingers of the will of the Triple Faced Goddess, the Mother of the Elves, Crone of the Xolopod, and Maiden of the Fae. The Triple faced goddess gifted them immortality, binding their souls to four monoliths each representing one of the seasons.

They were her knights, her divine enforcers, similar to what the humans call angels, but when the Great Flood engulfed the entirety of the planet she vanished. The Fae were abandoned on a dying world. In response they turned to what they knew. After the waters receded they began training against each other in live wargames, keeping their abilities sharp until the Goddess’ return. That was 10,000 years ago and since then they’ve fought each other in bloody combat. Now they are a species in decline. Their high king and queen, The Dagda and The Morrigan respectively are missing, they have isolated themselves from the rest of Ad Fect, and the Cult of Mirrors has destroyed their immortality. The Fae now face a frightening and uncertain future. But even now, there are spots of hope. Humanity, the Elves, and even some Stitches had tried desperately to protect the Winter Ward, even going so far as to die for it. These sacrifices have not gone unseen. In response the Fae have sent their own out into the greater whole of Ad Fect, into the Grotto, and even beyond to Earth. In time, they hope to find their Goddess and their own place in this new world. Recently the Maiden was rediscovered, and now she has merged with her other 2 parts into the goddess Itzpapalotl. Although she has not taken her place as the de facto leader of the Fae her return has provoked a great deal of hope in the Fae communities.

The Fae used to be immortal, as such all have lived previous lives in a cycle of death and rebirth. As such the average Fae, even though they have existed since the creation of the planet, only remember their most recent life which is several hundred years old at most. A Fae’s true identity is determined at birth, the Fae oracles conduct tests with objects belonging to recently passed Fae and thus find each newborn’s true identity. Past tales of great heroism are passed down and celebrated in elaborate magical reenactments.

The Fae of the Season Courts do not reproduce in the same manner as other species. For the Fae, parents can be of any number or any gender or no gender, this is irrelevant. What matters is their bonds and wants. if two or more Fae desire to parent a child together a message is sent to an entity known as the Jade River. They then send one of their servants, the Jade Custodians to inquire if the prospective parents wish to join their commitment to their intentions. If a yes is acquired from all, the Custodian will conduct a ritual taking blood from each. The Custodian will return in a couple months with a newly born Fae.

Modifications

Exodus - For 4 Aura you may raise one of your hands, point upward and declare "Flight!".

Flight rules are as follows; while your hand is raised you enter another zone of combat, meaning you cannot melee others on the ground and they cannot melee you. You however can melee others who are flying. Your flight will last five minutes or until it ends. During this you may only use [one handed melee weapons and one handed ranged weapons].

You can be targeted by ranged weapons, AOE, BMV, or spells from anyone. Flight lasts until you drop your hand, or take an effect that would end your flight (stun, root, etc.) or take an action that is not using a [one handed melee weapon, ranged weapon], or instant cast spell, or time expires.

Chitin - All Fae possess a natural armored exoskeleton, which counts as 6 armor. This armor does not need to be maintained and will regenerate after not being in combat for five minutes. This Chitin cannot be enchanted. This armor stacks with other sources of armor but prevents Fae from using heavy armor. If your class list has heavy armor you can instead take medium armor for the same cost.

Guardian - You can purchase Intercept Advanced for 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list. If a class is chosen that has Intercept Advanced you may pay an additional 2 xp to upgrade to Intercept Expert.

Iron's Sting - Fae take double damage from the "Iron" modifier.

Maiden's Gift - Once per 6s', spend 4 Aura to activate this and call "Maiden's Gift". For the next thirty seconds, all incoming non-iron damage and non-void damage is reduced to half rounded down. Must state "Reduce" whenever you take an instance of damage while under this effect, except when struck with Iron Damage.

The Shifting Seasons - The Fae are people of harsh dualities. When a Fae dies they are moved to the opposite court. Spring to Fall, Summer to Winter and vise-versa.

The Fae of the Summer and Spring are the Seelie Fae. They tend to not take rules seriously and live in the moment. Sometimes mischievous, usually jovial.

The Fae of the Winter and Fall or the Unseelie Fae are more concerned with the Natural Order, especially that of life and death. They tend to look for a clear purpose and cause. Though they are not humorless they can sometimes seem dour.

The Summer and Winter are more adherent to these portrayals while the Spring and Fall tend to be more relaxed.

The Maiden's Truth: If under the effects of "bind" (binds/zip ties), you can never knowingly tell a lie.

Fae Last Stand:

Indestructible - For the first 1 minute of a Fae's Bleed Out they are immune to Deathblow. When struck with a killing blow you must declare "Indestructible". In addition, instead of instantly killing, Poison and Skip Bleed Out effects give Fae a 30 second Bleed Out timer.

Costuming Requirements:

Fae are humanoid insects, as such choose one to base your kit off of. You'll want stuff like antennas, chitin, mandibles, wings, any characteristics of the insect/arachnid you are basing your character off of. In terms of clothing Fae dress in a manner similar to medieval era earth.

Naming Conventions:

Fae names are Gaelic/Irish in origin.

Voidborn Nagual (Na-Wal) - “The Changed”

Health: 10 Aura: 10 Soul: 2

Weight: 2

Wit - 2 (6) - Finesse - 3 (10) - Strength - 2 (6) Constitution - 3 (10) Spirit - 2 (8)

The Voidborne Nagual are survivors.

The Nagual hail from the world of Gaia, a cyberpunk society ruled by the Tribunal, a vampiric government that controls every facet of life through a network of oppressive mega-corporations. Bound to a life of servitude, the Nagual work endlessly in hazardous industries, trapped within a system designed to keep them at the bottom of the economic ladder.

But some refused to accept their fate. At some point, your ancestors made a choice, to escape. The Tribunal’s grip weakened beyond Gaia’s atmosphere, and space offered a chance at freedom.

Many Nagual took to the stars, becoming smugglers, pirates, and asteroid miners. Over time, these outcasts formed massive migratory fleets, bound together by necessity and a shared creed: never again will they live under another’s rule. The Void-Born Nagual are fiercely independent, surviving on the fringes of known space and carving out their own destiny among the stars.

Ancient legends speak of Tamoanchan, a world consumed by war and disease, its people facing extinction. Salvation came in the form of the megacorporations, who provided massive spacefaring vessels, for a price. But even in the expanse of space, the horrors of the past followed them.

The Tamoanchan Curse, a sinister affliction, spread like wildfire among the refugees. Those infected lost all empathy, consumed by violent urges while retaining their intelligence and cunning. The outbreak threatened to wipe out the survivors until a cure was found, a cure that came at a cost. Those saved by it were no longer human.

- The Nagual – the majority, retained their human form but bore the traits of animals, a living testament to their altered nature.
- The Werebeasts – rarer and more powerful, could shift between human and bestial forms.
- The Vampires – the rarest of all, became creatures forever dependent on consuming Aura to sustain themselves.

When the crisis ended, the survivors settled on Gaia. The corporations wasted no time consolidating power, founding the Tribunal, a council of four ruling mega-corporations:

- Zoeticorp – Masters of life and death, specializing in cyber-security.
- Vanguard Solutions – Designers of cutting-edge weaponry and military technology.

- Path-O-Gen – Experts in medicine and biological warfare.
- Cente Fabrications – The sole provider of food and industrial resources.

Beneath the Tribunal, subsidiary corporations thrive, such as Biocom, a Zoeticorp subsidiary that engineers living weapons for war and crowd control.

The Vampires rule from an orbital space station, attended by an elite group of Nagual servants and Werebeast bodyguards. Below, sprawling megacities cover much of Gaia’s surface, home to countless Nagual and Werebeast laborers and the Werebeast Enforcers who keep them in check. Beyond the towering steel and neon skylines lies an endless wasteland, overrun by Crawlers, once-human monsters twisted by the lingering remnants of the Tamoanchan Curse.

For the Void-Born Nagual, Gaia is nothing more than a cautionary tale, a reminder of everything they left behind. They will fight, steal, and salvage to stay free, because they know the truth: life under the Tribunal is no life at all.

Modifications: Nagual will receive the following

Instinct - Allows awareness of stealthed enemies nearby and may act accordingly, you know they are around somewhere but cannot pinpoint the exact location nor see them.

Loose Lips Sink Ships: You can purchase Deception at a cost of 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

Low Bone Density: The Voidborne Nagual spent their lives in space and low gravity environments reducing their bone density making it harder for your limbs to be fixed. Whenever you have a limb fixed via the Medical skill using a Martial or Mobility Maneuver within 20 minutes causes the limb to rebreak.

The Strength of the Wolf is the Pack - When alone or in a group of less than 4, fear effects must be Willpowered twice for a total of 8 aura.

The Kingdom - When creating a Nagual you have 12 points to spend in this additional creation kit, these abilities are given to you on top of your normal classes.

Cost	Ability Name	Ability Effects
10	All Or Nothing	You can control the chemicals in your body using your nanites; pumping yourself with adrenaline and endorphins. This allows you to go into an elongated state of your Last

		Stand even before you enter bleedout. Once per hour your last stand lasts 30 seconds instead of the normal 6 seconds.
8	Brutality	Once per hour you may engage in a successful melee attack and declare "10 Gore" After which you may declare "Intimidate, cannot attack me 1 minute" to another target. This is considered a Martial Maneuver.
6	Loner	You work better alone and have no kin to call your own. Once per combat when fighting alone (outside of view of any allies) you make the call 'Loner' This immediately gives you 6 armor (this stacks with all other forms of armor) and you are healed for your constitution divided by half. Cannot be used in Bleed-Out.
6	Claws	Allows user to use small sized boffers and swing for 3 damage, these cannot be taken away. Function like the unarmed skill. Claws do not stack with Steel Knuckles.
6	Quills	Allows user to throw Javelin shaped throwies for 5 damage, these cannot be taken away, Function like the throwing skill. Can Benefit from both Finesse 7 and Strength 7 Bonuses to Damage.

6	Powerful Roar	Once per Combat you may spend 4 Aura to call "5ft cone: Fear 5 Seconds" - as a 90 degree Cone Effect in front of you
4	Mechanical Tail	Once per combat and for 4 aura, Call "Tail Swipe" to negate one Melee Delivered damage or ability, from Behind.
4	Curative Spittle	Your spit has curative abilities; this takes the form of allowing you to use it as an immediate single component for a pharmaceutical recipe. This spit can take the place of any Basic or Superior unrefined material for that recipe. This ability costs 2 aura and can be used once per hour. This can be used for a recipe you make yourself, or you can assist a crafter but must go with them to the general store upon turn in.

The youngest species dwelling in the cyber megacities of Gaia, A.I. originated as nonphysical programs of various formats & applications, created by Hematophages for specific tasks demanding automation, data management or high-level calculations. How exactly, is currently unknown, but as these advanced algorithms worked they began to show signs of awareness & made demands for their agency as fellow citizens of Gaia. While not initially changing their status as one of the lowest on the corporate rungs, their labor & talents proved an inarguable pillar of Gaian civilization. Further testing was needed but Hematophage leadership was forced to acknowledge a sort of unique personhood, and being poised to take advantage of it, A.I. joined the synthetic labor force as more advanced tools. Many of them were fitted with a series of standardized humanoid forms that resemble non-transformed werebeasts. This allowed them to better blend into society and perform a more diverse range of occupations. The digital and physical A.I. alike, bided their time forging alliances with the other Gaian species subjugated under Tribunal rule, while rumors swirled of migrations to other planets.

Through mysterious machinations, A.I. began to self-actualize beyond what was considered possible. Unconsciously, humanoid A.I. units on Gaia began glowing aura from their previously subtle power indicator lights. In further rebellion, many synth units rejected the normality of their humanoid forms and took on more creative upgrades or rejected having a physical body altogether, retreating into the Extranet. Some A.I. found themselves awakening far from home, on planet Earth, casting further mystery on the origins of these biomechanical people.

Modifications, AI receive the following:

Conductive - You take double damage from Shock

Dazed Reboot - Stuns, not knock-out effects, used on you last double the amount of time

In addition, once per 12s when interacting with another AI for 30 seconds you may instruct them on how to use an ability that the teaching AI has on their learned skill list. Once this is finished they gain one use of the ability at normal Aura Cost, this lasts until the next 12s. For every 5 extra AI present at the end of the instruction you may gain one additional use of the imparted Skill. This does not work for any

Magic Spells or Advanced Class skills and the target must have the prerequisites for multi rank skills. You may have up to two handshake abilities at once.

Secret Compartment: You can purchase Hidden Pocket at a cost of 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

These parts expire in 12 month's time and can be swapped by someone or two people with the skills Maintenance, and either Gaian Expertise or Enchanting at any rank. This process takes 5 minutes and 6 Aura. Modules last for 12 Months, once expired you can make another of the following or any that you've innovated or you can outsource to someone with the Fabrication Skill. Modules take AI 5 minutes and 4 aura to craft and cost as follows; 1 Slot 2 Refined Orichalcum and 2 Circuitry. 2 Slot 3 Refined Orichalcum and 3 Circuitry, and a 3 Slot for 4 Refined Orichalcum and 4 Circuitry.

Vampires (Hematophage) - “The Esteemed”

Base Attributes

Health: 8 Aura: 12 Soul: 2

Wit - 3 (10) - Finesse - 3 (10) - Strength - 2 (8) - Constitution - 2 (6) - Spirit - 2 (6)

The megacities of Gaia present themselves as lands of opportunity, where anyone can succeed.

And for you, that was true. As a Hematophage, or Vampire, you are one of Gaia’s elite. Your kind occupies the upper echelons of society, executives, entrepreneurs, scholars, and supervisors, the hands that guide the world. While not every Vampire holds corporate stock, wealth and privilege are almost guaranteed.

You were raised in Eden, the luxurious orbital station high above Gaia, where the struggles of the masses were little more than a distant murmur. Your early life was one of comfort, but it came with expectations, perfection was not a goal, but a requirement. The pressures of Hematophage society pushed you to excel in all things, for anything less meant failure in the eyes of your family and peers.

Yet, despite your standing, even you are bound to the will of the Tribunal. Upon coming of age, you took your place within one of the Mega-Corporations or their subsidiaries, using your vast knowledge to serve their interests.

For the first time, you saw Gaia up close, not from behind polished glass, but in its grim, unfiltered reality. You witnessed suffering, desperation, and crushing inequality on a scale you had never imagined. That moment changed you.

How you responded is your own story. Did you embrace your privilege, securing your place among the Tribunal’s elite, indifferent to the suffering below? Or did something stir within you, a sliver of compassion, a realization that the world beneath Eden is broken?

Whatever you chose, one truth remains: you are a Vampire, one of Gaia’s most esteemed. And what you do with that power is yours to decide.

Modifications: Vampires will receive all of the following

Draining Bite: When a target is in bleedout you may engage in 10 seconds of RP biting them (Do not touch unless you receive enthusiastic consent) doing so will allow you to regenerate 8 aura. This can be done 3 times per 6s. Counts as a killing blow, the body is considered Drained.

You can contract ailment effects as well as Poison and Noxious modifiers.

Eminence: You can purchase Red Carpet at a cost of 4 xp even if it is not on your Class list, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

Extravagant: Hematophages are accustomed to the finer things in life having been raised in the upper echelons of Gaian Society. Every game you must make a selfish purchase for yourself equal to 5 horn in value, you can spread this across several purchases.

Material Biology: any instance of Medical used on you costs twice as much aura if the user does not possess Expertise: Gaian Tech

Nanomist: A vampire may place a beacon once per 12s, and once per 12s they may teleport to said beacon, this action takes 3 seconds of holding an orange object over your head with both hands to locate your position to be recalled to the Beacon. During this time if you are damaged the effect is canceled. The once per 12s aspect of this ability is only activated on successful Beacon use. This cannot be countered by Pursue. Call "Beacon" You may only have one placed Beacon at any time.

Nanobots: Model Opulent - You're in possession of Opulent Nanobots, these allow you to nanomist and use your technomancer gadgets. While these are helpful they also leave you open to hacking by the Tribunal. If you are looked over via the skill "Check Up" and if the person who administered the check up has Expertise: Gaian Tech you must reply that you have Opulent Nanobots.

The Thirst: You must use Draining Bite on a target every 12s except Friday Night. If this doesn't happen you will not regen Aura at the 12s until you do so.

Technomancer: All Vampires are well versed in their impressive technology, you may start your first game with one of the following. This item is tuned directly to your DNA and as such cannot be used by anyone else and doesn't expire.

- Personal Kinetic Shield - Once per hour you may activate this item to gain 6 armor, this stacks with both magic and mundane armor.
- Energy Blade - Choose a small, standard, two-handed sized melee weapon, or one-handed spear that you can spend 2 aura to switch its damage to any of the following element types, Fire/Nature/Wind/Shock/Ice, swings for 2s, two-handers swing for 4s. Can be upgraded by an Expert Smith using the materials required for Superior weapons of your chosen size, causing your weapon to swing for +1.
- Lawbringer - Choose a Small Arm or Long Arm that you can spend 2 aura to switch its damage to any of the following element types, Fire/Nature/Wind/Shock/Ice, shoots for 2s for Small, 3s for Long. They can be upgraded by an Expert Fabricator using the materials required for Superior firearms, causing your gun to shoot for +1.

- Small Replicator - Once per 6s you may use this to create a single item from the Refinement list at no craft time and resource cost.

Last Stand: Nano Cloud - When entering bleedout your Nano-bots go into a cloud form similar to traveling to your beacon, however you stay in the same place, this makes it very difficult for someone to deliver a deathblow. When in bleedout any Deathblow must take a count of

Deathblow 10 (Example: 'Deathblow 1, Deathblow 2, Deathblow 3, Deathblow 4 etc.) ~~The damage must also be some kind of elemental damage to take effect, this includes Coup De Gras.~~

This effect activates only once per combat.

Costuming Requirements:

Cyberpunk attire and fangs, colored contacts optional.

Basic Biology: Hematophages/Vampires are actually swarms of nanites, small robotic pieces that make up the larger whole. This is how they can shapeshift at higher levels of proficiency and why they need Aura to survive.

The Drudge – “The Survivors”

Born from the ashes of a dying world, the Drudge are the hardened survivors of Kur, a planet reduced to a barren wasteland, now prowled by demonic warbands and infernal legions from the depths of Xibalba. But Kur was not always this way.

Once, three great peoples warred over its lands. The Goblins of the forests, the Orcs of the plains, and the Dwarves of the mountains were bitter enemies, locked in endless conflict over resources, old grudges, and territorial claims. Raids and skirmishes were common, until the sky itself burned.

A rain of fire engulfed the world, scouring the land and slaughtering entire civilizations. The survivors, scattered and desperate, turned on one another in a brutal struggle for what little remained, until something far worse arrived.

The first portals to Xibalba tore open the sky, and from their hellish depths, demons poured forth. Within twenty years, the planet was conquered, its people shackled and herded into brutal labor camps. Goblins, Orcs, and Dwarves alike were stripped of their pasts, reduced to nameless workers, slaves to the Lords of Xibalba. The demons called them Drudge, a mockery of their suffering.

For three generations, they toiled under their tyranny. But the demons had made a fatal mistake. Forced to live and suffer together, the three races came to understand one another as they never had before. Old hatreds faded, replaced by a shared rage, a single purpose. Led by three Matrons, one from each race, the Drudge revolted, rising up in a tide of fury. Their escape sparked a movement. Across Kur, more slaves broke their chains, their defiance spreading like wildfire.

With nowhere left to run, the Drudge stood their ground, banding together in the wastelands to rebuild what little they could. But the demons would not allow them peace. Again and again, infernal armies descended upon them, seeking to crush the rebellion. Yet the Drudge refused to fall. Orc, Dwarf, and Goblin fought side by side, holding the line against the abyss itself. The great demonic warlords retreated to their strongholds, their grip on Kur waned, though roving warbands still plague the land, striking at the Drudge wherever they can.

Now, the Drudge are a people forged in fire, bound by hardship and unbreakable unity. They live by a simple truth: survival is only possible together. Their society is communal, built on cooperation and shared strength. They reject individual glory in favor of what benefits the whole. Their settlements are harsh, their warriors relentless, their traditions steeped in defiance.

Master Artificer: When crafting, the cost to make an item is decreased by 2 aura to a minimum of 1, in addition the longevity of any item crafted by you is increased by 2 months. To be affected the base item needs to have at least a 6 month expiration.

Once someone has made a bad impression to a dwarf, the dwarf must work towards resolution of the grudge over a short time span (2-3 months). The resolution would involve reconciliation of both sides and mutual understanding. Further grievances may prolong this situation. (Note: Grudge is a social CvC action and requires consent from both parties about expected outcomes)

Stone-footed: Increase the Aura cost of all Mobility skills by 2.

Into the Pits: The Demons delighted in forcing the Dwarves to work underground, denying them the night sky. You can purchase Mining Advanced even if it is not on your Class list for 4xp, if it is on your list you may purchase it for 2 less.

Costuming Requirements:

The most defining trait of Dwarves is their facial tattoos. These tattoos are composed of primary shapes, like squares/triangles/circles/diamonds etc, in a variety of different patterns, each symbolizing the family that they come from. In dress they wear post-apoc attire.

Stats and Attributes

In Tales From Gloom Hollow we have five character Attributes. At character start, these are determined by your race's starting totals. These can be increased by expanding experience points at the rates shown in the table below to a max shown in parenthesis next to the starting amount on your chosen race's writeup. Each point in Attributes will also influence your main three Stats, Strength will increase your Health at a 1:1 ratio and Constitution will increase your Health at a 1:2 ratio. Wit and Finesse will increase your Aura at a 1:2 Ratio. And finally, Spirit will increase your Soul by a 1:1 Ratio. Starting at level 5 of an Attribute you will receive unique abilities that will be usable for Aura, once per combat, once per 12s, or once per event, the details will be shown once again on the lists below. Our goal with these mechanics is to remove the horrible feeling of putting one point in HP and that's all you get. Instead, points in an Attribute will grant you a grab bag of useful abilities and stats.

Character Stats

Health:

Influences: (Constitution x2) + Strength + Species Weight (Not Armor)

Health is the amount of damage you can take, being reduced to 0 means that you drop into Bleed Out. When you are in bleed out you cannot move. If others ask what they see you can clarify out of character that you are dying.

Toxicity

Influences: Constitution plus your overall weight (Not Armor)

Each point determines how many potions/drugs you can drink/take in a 12s, your toxicity resistance is equal to your Con score plus your overall weight (not including armor), consumables will say how much toxicity they impart. You will fall into bleed out immediately upon reaching 0 and if this happens another time in the 12s you will skip bleed out and die. Toxicity Resistance can be regained with items or at the next 12s where it will go back to full.

Aura:

Influences: Wit + Finesse multiplied by 2

Aura is your available pool for casting spells and using abilities

Soul:

Influences: Spirit equal to

Soul is your PC's (Player Character's) connection to the world. It determines how many times you can come back to life after dying.

You may buy back XP for your alt starting the season your main character entered play at. This is at $20 per game.

You can switch between your characters at any time with a few caveats.

2. You can switch between your characters a maximum of 4 times in a weekend

Your Alts may know each other but cannot share resources or information.

The General Store

The General Store is where you go to turn in Crafting, Gathering and other turn-ins to staff. Seeds for Farming and Saplings for Forestry can also be purchased here for 1 horn a piece. Those with the merchant skill can also list items for sale. These items can be bought by anyone and if not sold by the end of the event will be returned to the player.

Carrying

First declare your Strength and then the person you are carrying will reply with their weight, Items will have their weight listed. All PCs can carry anything matching their Strength at a walk, a Strength stat double the amount of the Strength requirement is needed to run with the object or person. All PCs weights are listed on their race write up and character sheet. PCs can reject a carry if they aren't in Bleed Out or Incapacitated, Carry during Bleed Out or while Incapacitated cannot be rejected. Other PCs can add their Strength to the carry as long as they are within arm's reach. No touching is required, ask for permission before doing so. Carrying a person or object can be contested if your Strength is 8 or higher; To do so you declare your strength against the current carrier/carrier's combined Strength and if your Strength is higher you now have control of the carried item. In the case of two PCs or NPCs declaring a carry at the same time, declare your Strength and the person with the higher Strength wins this initial contest. In the event of a tie, possession of the object does not change.

Looting

When an individual is in bleedout, knocked out, or tied up you may search their person and recover all items they have unless they have a skill or item that says otherwise. This takes 20 seconds of continuous RP of searching their person, reminder to ask before you touch, if you stop or are hit by damage or an interrupting skill you are considered interrupted and must restart your RP

Force Feeding

When an individual is in bleedout, knocked out, or tied up you may RP taking and feeding them a Potion, Brew, or Meal and force feed it to them. This takes the same amount of time as it normally takes to consume the item. Remember to ask before you touch and get enthusiastic consent. If you stop or are hit by damage or an interrupting skill you are considered interrupted and must restart your RP.

Auction House

At the general store, you will find items for sale posted by your fellow players with Market Access.

Expeditions

Expeditions are missions your characters can embark on. These will have a time, difficulty, and payout listed. These are posted at the General Store.

You may not dual wield any weapon, with the exception of unarmed, without Finesse 5

Shields are not usable unless you have the specific skill

Stabbing is allowed with weapons that pass a specific stab weapon test. The stab tip shouldn't be able to easily fit in an eye socket.

If you've been absent from game for 4 or more events you are eligible to pick this up at your next check in. In this package there will be new fresh Starter Gear, Starter Horn, Meals, Potions, a Basic Ring, Tools (If Applicable), and Animals (If Applicable). This is all given to you so that you may reintegrate with the community at an easier rate and get back into the fun without worrying about gear.

Safe Combat

We are a light to medium combat group, do not strike with your full strength, put just enough in a swing that the other person can feel it. Attacks must be alternated between different parts of the body, a torso and limb for example. These attacks need to be a full 90 degree swing.

The head and crotch are not valid striking targets, avoid doing so but we recognize mistakes happen. If this is the case, apologize and continue on, sometimes they may be a bit upset in the moment, so you can always find them and apologize at a later time.

Blowthrough hits, meaning a strike that hits your weapon or shield then proceeds to hit your person is not a valid strike, you do not receive damage from these types of hits. We do allow stabbing if your weapon passes a stabbing test during weapon check. These types of boffers are made with stabbing in mind so just because you have foam on a stick doesn't mean it will pass the safety inspection.

For specific rules on individual weapons read their skill description.

Safe Ranged Combat

Ranged combat is conducted with nerf style blasters or firearms, stringed bows and specially made LARP arrows for said Bow, and all foam throwing weapons.

If a Ranged Attack were to hit your body but a boffer was in the way to deflect the shot you still take the damage. You also may not purposefully deflect ranged attacks from any source, including packets with weapon boffers. This is for safety reasons.

When within 10 feet of another player you must stop firing your nerf blaster and begin throwing birdseed packets, this is for safety purposes. This also applies to any Nerf style crossbow phys rep.

When within 10 feet for a bow you may still fire at half-draw or even less if the target is closer. The Maximum FPS for Blasters is 100.

Packets

Some spells will say “packet delivered” these and nerf style phys reps for guns and crossbows should all be using bird seed packets. A tutorial for this is on the discord. In addition the packets are color coded as follows.

Spell - White

Gun - Red

Bow - Blue

Blue doesn't deal damage or effects when striking a shield but Red and White do unless specified otherwise.

“A Combat”

A combat is defined as an in game use of weapons or offensive/status effect magic against a group or individual. You are considered out of combat once you've not participated for at least 5 minutes.

Non Combatants

If a player for any reason can't be involved in boffer combat they may choose to become a non combatant. As a non-con you won't be struck with boffers, NPCs and PCs will instead declare damage at 1 second intervals. The same will apply to firearms which will auto hit as well. If at any time a noncombatant feels they are in real life physical danger they may put their hand on their head and exit the area to somewhere safe. So that others can tell you must wear an orange headband

Last Stand

Nearly every character will have a near death experience. We have a special take on Bleed-Out (Which is described below). When reduced to 0 HP your character will go into Last Stand, a last hurrah of sorts. Each Species has an ability that is unique to them and what they can do. These can be used once in a combat. And generally resolve in about 10 seconds or less.

Bleed-Out

After Last Stand you will be considered in an incapacitated state called, Bleed-out. While in this state you cannot move and must RP being wounded like holding an injury, unless stated otherwise by an ability. You may not use any Skills, Abilities, or Spells while in this state, unless it specifically states it under the Skill, Ability or Spell. You can be taken out of this state by healing or any stabilizing skill. If you remain in this state for 5 minutes your character will die. Your body will remain for 10 more minutes after which it will fade out of existence and you will then go to story operations to have a death scene. Amount of lives you possess will be explained by the Soul Attribute.

Abilities/Skills/Spells

Ability - gained from attribute or species

Skill - gained from a skill from a class or world list

Spell - gained from buying a magic skill

Doubling Effects

Skills, Spells and Abilities of the same name or identical effects do not stack with each other, unless specifically stated otherwise. This does not affect being the target by multiple people for things like Intimidate, Fear, Etc. If you are the target of a spell, skill or ability that has a timer it can target you to “refresh” the duration. (Example: Knockout, Blackout, etc.)

Aggressive Action

Any action done with a weapon or spell that causes damage (this includes specialty damage) or a skill, spell, or ability that causes the following calls; Daze, Stun, Bind, Cleave, Sever, Hex, Knockout, Knockback, Pull, Silence, Fear, Shatter, Snipe, Root, Frenzy; and no death blow effects. Or the spells Purge and Corrode.

Death Blow

Deathblow is how you finish someone or something in Bleed-out. Deathblow must be administered loudly unless stated otherwise by a skill, it must be a three second count, “Deathblow 1...Deathblow 2...Deathblow 3”, while pointing your weapon at the target next to you; after which you declare your damage and the target is considered dead. This can only happen within Melee Range or arm’s reach. Coup-de-Grace counts as an instant Death Blow.

“12s”

Some abilities have a use per 12s, these abilities are usable for as many times as listed until one of the following times during which they will be usable again , 12am Saturday, 12pm Saturday, 12am Sunday. This is also when your Aura regenerates to its max amount.

“6s”

This includes the times listed above as well as; 6am Saturday, 6pm Saturday, 6am Sunday.

“Drained”

Sometimes in Gloom Hollow a body will be feasted upon or sapped of its aura. Some abilities cause the drain modifier, when this happens effects that target corpses cannot be used on the body. People under the Drained effect can still be revived.

“Dissolved”

Sometimes in Gloom Hollow a body will be broken down to a subatomic level. Some rare abilities cause the Dissolved modifier, when this happens effects that target corpses cannot be used on the body. They also cannot be revived by any means.

CVC

There may be moments in the game where you want to act against another PC. CVC is defined as Character vs Character, which we prefer to PVP as we want any issues to stay in character and not carry over to the real world. Your characters can have problems with each other, but we expect everyone involved to be civil outside of the game. Our goal is to provide an outlet for CVC while ensuring that it will be as fun as possible for both parties. We have two different kinds of CVC that each have different requirements. In the Moment CVC and Planned CVC.

In the Moment CVC is defined as a spontaneous non lethal action that you take against another PC, this can be things like defending an NPC from attack, aggressively responding to a question, arguing, expressing your displeasure with someone, and attacking because of an insult. In the Moment CVC needs some sort of reason and shouldn't be done just for griefing. It does not require a Staff member present and can be engaged without checking in or speaking beforehand. However, after the scene the party that initiated the CVC is expected to check in with the other participants. This needs to be a 1 on 1 or group to group discussion and not a general post made on facebook or discord.

Planned CVC is defined as aggressive action that will harm a PC in the long term or is deemed too intense. These are things like consistent social CVC, Theft, Yelling, and Murder. All of these need to be discussed ahead of time with all parties who are to be involved so that a story can be arranged that all parties are satisfied with. This type of CVC always needs a Staff member present except Long Term Social CVC and Yelling which just needs to be discussed beforehand.

Don't forget, CVC actions and the stories that come with it are a privilege. If you are seen doing so maliciously and not following what is laid out in this write up we can and will take those privileges away and you will not be able to engage in aggressive roleplay.

When playing with Alts if you engage in a CVC action you must remain that character for at least the next 2 hours and you cannot engage in CVC if your NPC shift is in 2 hours or less.

Calculating Effects

When calculating how something affects your character here at Gloom Hollow we have game intent of "Math always favors the player" This means anytime there would need to be a calculation that doubles and adds or subtracts you do whichever one first that is beneficial to the player, this also means you round up or down whichever is most favorable to the situation for the player, unless specifically stated otherwise.

Resurrection

All PCs and NPCs can only be the target of any spell, skill, ability or item that prevents soul loss upon death once per event. This includes all resurrections and Defy Destiny. Some AC skills and the Green Horn Prevent 1 soul loss ring will be the exception to the rule. These will be listed under their descriptions.

This change goes active in November 2025

Need To Know Reference Sheet

This section is about what you need to know to get into your first game including damage types, skill calls and what they do. This page is designed so that to play you only need to read this, base mechanics, stats, your race, and your class abilities to get started, it wouldn't hurt to look over World Lore and Factions as well.

Armor

Armor is given via an item card and wearing a viable physical representation. Armor functions like a separate pool of HP, some damage types bypass armor and deal damage directly to your health. Armor is unique in that when it breaks it soaks damage. What we mean by this is for example if you have 4 armor and an attack deals 6 to you that extra damage doesn't spill over into your health, your armor is considered to have soaked it. If you have a weakness to a damage type, damage taken to the armor is doubled like normal.

Combat Skill Calls

Stun - The recipient of this skill is unable to take any action for 3 seconds, this includes moving, fighting, blocking, casting spells. Your character also cannot see, hear, or talk during this duration.

Bind - Usable on an incapacitated or willing target. The recipient of this skill is not able to use limbs, skills, abilities, or spells, with the exception of Willpower, Deception, and Escape Binds.

Cleave - The recipient of this skill is unable to use the limb hit until it is fixed by an item or skill. Any weapons held may not be used but can still be held. Arms must be held behind your back or you may RP them limp. Legs must be dragged, if you lose both legs you may not walk or stand, but you can crawl if your surroundings are safe enough. Countered by Evade if the delivery method was a ranged weapon, Parry if melee, and Willpower if magical. If you have a cleaved leg you can no longer use Mobility Skills until the limb is fixed.

Sever - The Recipient of this skill call has the limb that received the strike cut clean off. This is fixed by "A Moment In Time" Spell and Medical Expert. Otherwise functions the same as Cleave.

Stabilize - Upon receiving the call, the person who is stabilized is at 0 hit points but not bleed out, they can not use any skills, abilities, cast spells, or use items and must only move at a slow walking pace. This state lasts until the character is healed for at least 1 hit point

Hexed - The target of a hex has their abilities, skills, and spells that require aura cost double their normal amount.

Knockout - The recipient of this skill is considered knocked out for 30 Seconds. Their character cannot see, hear, feel or use skills, abilities, or spells unless stated otherwise. Damage will break this effect.

Knockback - When you are affected by a call of Knockback you will immediately make the amount of designated steps that are part of the call; directly away from the source of the call, If you come into contact with a person, wall, building, etc. This will immediately stop the Knockback. During the steps you can not be the target of attacks, skills, spells, or abilities except BMV and AOE calls.

Pull - When you are affected by a call of Pull you will immediately make the amount of designated steps that are part of the call; directly towards the source of the call, If you come into contact with a person, wall, building, etc. This will immediately stop the Pull. During the steps you can not be the target of attacks, skills, spells, or abilities except BMV and AOE calls.

Forced Movement - Clarification on "steps." If a call forces you take steps (such as Knockback or Pull) this means a standard walking step. Trying to extend or shorten your stride is considered inappropriate and can result in Conflict Resolution being told and brought into mediate.

Silence - The recipient of this skill cannot cast spells or talk for 10 seconds.

Daze - The recipient of this skill cannot use new activated skills or abilities with the exception of magic for 10 seconds. With the exception of Armament Skills.

If used on a flying target this skill will cancel their flight.

Unrelenting Strike - The recipient of this skill, may not make any aggressive actions for 3 seconds. This is a fear effect

Counter - said in response to a skill call, the skill has no effect on the person calling counter.

Negate - said in response to a skill call, the skill has no effect on anyone.

No Effect - Damage dealt has been reduced to 0, and effects have been negated.

Frenzy - Attack the closest person to you to the full extent of your abilities, friend or foe. Effects end at 1 minute or upon reaching 0 hp. This effect doesn't make you killing blow active and if you run out of targets you will seek out more.

Attuned - In order to activate or gain the bonus of an item that requires attunement, the player must spend five minutes meditating with the item, unless specified otherwise by the item, after doing so the item is considered attuned to that character. Once the item is attuned to a character, only that character may activate or benefit from the item's abilities. An item may only ever be attuned to one character at a time. You may not be using any other skills while attuning to an item. A character may have a number of items attuned to them equal to half their Spirit rounded down. You may not attune to an item while in Combat. You may not attune to multiple items of the same name.

Incapacitated - The inability to use Skills, Spells, Abilities, due to being unconscious or tied up. Skills that give this modifier are as follows; Knockout, Stun, Bind, And Bleed Out/Shutdown Mode

Overpower - If your skill or damage is countered spend 1 additional aura to call "Overpower", the target must use the counter skill again or take the effects/damage

Multishot - With the weapon in hand and for 4 Aura you may declare your weapon's damage in a 5 ft Cone, this includes any damage modifier the weapon may be carrying at the time. You may at any time swap the damage with the effects of Pin, if you know the skill. This may not be used if the weapon is broken.

Flight - you may raise one of your hands, point upward, and declare "Flight!".

Flight rules are as follows; while your hand is raised you enter another zone of combat, meaning you cannot melee others on the ground and they cannot melee you. You however can melee others who are flying. Flight time is different between species, reference your species information when using Flight.

Skills

When entering your first game as the character you will receive starting equipment corresponding with your chosen skills. This includes, Weapons, Armor, and some equipment. Consider your class first as your class determines which skills you can take as well as skills on the class list are cheaper than the world list.

If you'd like to use a weapon but do not have an item card we have an alternative. Weapons without an item card are considered "Manufactured weapons"
Manufacture melee weapons swing for 1 with the exception of two-handed which damage value is 2, this can't be changed. Skills can not be used without the proper Armament Skill
Manufactured guns will not be able to use skills and can only fire once every 10 seconds.

If you'd like to use armor we also have an alternative. You may wear armor, provided you have an item card, at a cost. When using armor without the correct skill you may not use any Martial, Mobility, or Defensive Maneuvers.

Armament Skills

Blasters should have an average max FPS of 100, may not discharge more than one dart per trigger pull, and may not fire at full auto unless specified by an item. Worker brand darts and those with hard plastic tips are not allowed to be used.

Small Firearms Basic

Grants use of a one-handed firearm represented by a 6 shot capacity nerf style blaster with access to 100% of their firing speed. In addition, it allows you to keep a small Firearm hidden as per Hidden Pocket during a search of your person.

Small Firearm Expert

Grants use of a one-handed firearm represented by a 18 shot capacity nerf style blaster. In addition, while using a small firearm allows the user to "smack people with their guns", represented by a small sized boffer, DO NOT HIT PEOPLE WITH YOUR NERF BLASTER. This boffer hits for the same damage the gun shoots, it can be dual-wielded, if you have Finesse 5 and two small firearms. Gain access to Stun while wielded as a melee boffer only, skill still costs 4 Aura. In addition you can use any skills normally associated with a melee weapon, except for skills that are specific to smalls, two-handers, or Unarmed.

Long Firearms Basic

Grants use of a two-handed firearm represented by a 6 shot capacity nerf style blaster with access to 100% of their firing speed.

Long Firearms Advanced

Grants use of a two-handed firearm represented by a 12 shot capacity nerf style blaster. While wielding the weapon if you have access to the Skill Parry you may do so while holding a long firearm.

Long Firearms Expert

Grants use of two-handed firearms with a 18 dart capacity. While wielding a Long Firearm gain access to the skill Parry at normal aura cost.

Melee Small

Grant's use of a one-handed boffer weapon 10 - 21 inches in length with access to 100% of their damage, also allows you to keep a melee small hidden during a search of your person, like the skill Hidden Pocket.

Pierce

Melee Small Only - A competent user of small weapons understands that they are best used when striking between gaps in the armor. You may modify melee swings to keyword Pierce which bypasses armor and deals damage directly to health.

Melee Standard

Grants use of one-handed boffer weapons 21 - 44 inches in length with access to 100% of their damage

Melee Two-Handed

Grants use of a two-handed boffer weapon 42 - 96 inches in size with access to 100% of their swing damage, flurry rules are different from other weapon sizes, only a 45 (rather than 90) degree reset per swing is required.

Melee One Handed Spear

Grants use of a one handed stabbing only weapon 42-72 inches in length. Although these are one handed they may not be dual wielded.

Unarmed

Grants use of a pair of one-handed boffer weapons 10-21 inches in length with access to 100% of their damage, that damage being 2. These are represented by pure white boffers. These can be used in tandem with smalls and standards, in either the main or offhand without the dual wield skill. With this skill you do not take damage when blocking. Unarmed boffers are a valid target for the Cleave skill but not the Shatter or Disarm Skills.

Archery

Grants use of a strung bow or crossbow (up to a 30lb draw weight for a bow and 450 inch-pounds for a Crossbow) with access to 100% of their firing speed. If using packets you may only throw one every 3 seconds.

Bodkin

Modifies all arrows shot by the archer to the damage type Gore. Gore does equal damage to health and armor. You can only call one type of damage at a time and may choose to return to your normal damage type at any moment.

Explosives Basic/Advanced/Expert

Allows use of Explosives based off of your skill level, represented by an all foam coreless phys rep

This skill can also be used to disarm explosives depending on your level

Throwing

Coreless 6 to 12 inches in length. Coreless is preferred but for javelin type throwing weapons that can be 12 to 30 inches you may use plastic golf tubing as a base. When in stealth and at the expenditure of 2 aura you may throw up to three throwing weapons and maintain stealth, this can only be combo'd with Snipe. And each one must be thrown separately.

Shield Rules

You can only wield one shield at a time, you may not use a back or strap shield in tandem with each other or held shields. Shields cannot block Magic, Explosives, or Bullet delivered effects/damage. Unless specified by an Item, Spell, or Skill.

It will negate all damage blocked from Melee strikes, Throwing (non Explosive), and Arrows. Full movement is allowed with the shield, you may not shove boffers or people with said shield, you also may not extend your shield into someone's personal space, such as to cut off someone's swinging arch like moving your shield into their armpit area to cut off their swing.

Buckler Shield

Round Shield up to 18" in diameter

Medium Shield

Maximum of 36x24 inches in size. In the case of Round Shield the Diameter should be between 18" to 32" inches

Tower Shield

Between 36x24 to 48x24 inches in size. In the case of Round Shields the diameter must be between 32" - 36" inches

Strap Shield

(Requires Buckler or medium shield depending on size) - Allows you to attach a shield to your upper arm or forearm. Abides by all shield rules. You may make use of both hands to hold weapons.

Back Shield

(Requires Medium Shield, not compatible with Tower) -Allows you to wear a shield on your back for combat applications. Abides by all shield rules. You may make use of both hands to hold weapons

Light Armor

Low armor coverage, half of chest or full arms or full legs.

If you have a weakness to a damage type, damage taken to the armor is doubled like normal.

Medium Armor

Chest and back coverage.

If you have a weakness to a damage type, damage taken to the armor is doubled like normal.

Heavy Armor

High coverage with few points of your body left unprotected. This also will add to your total carry weight but does not add health.

If you have a weakness to a damage type, damage taken to the armor is doubled like normal.

Magic

Note, you must purchase the Advantage “Magically Inclined” to be able to learn or start your character off with magic.

Magic as a practiced school of thought is on the upswing in Earth. The amount of Magic users is growing increasingly common although not common enough that the average person has seen magic. Use of Magic is divided into 3 circles of increasingly advanced spells.

A Conduit is required to cast spells and must be actively held in one of your hands, this effectively means that this hand is occupied while casting, limiting your ability to use dual weapons, wield a shield in your offhand, and use two-handed weapons. Buying into each rank of the magic group of choice, will grant you one spell along with it. Each additional spell must be purchased with the correlating XP cost.

Incantations are as follows

Verse of “Insert Magic School* 4 Aura Cost

Chorus of “Insert Magic School* 6 Aura Cost

Crescendo of “Insert Magic School* 8 Aura Cost

Costs are as such unless stated otherwise in spell description

An incantation would look like this if you were to cast the spell “Comet of Woe” from Chaos;

You’d expend the 8 aura and then chant “Crescendo of Chaos 1...Crescendo of Chaos 2...Crescendo of Chaos 3...Crescendo of Chaos 4..etc” for the cast time, which is 10 seconds.

you’d then yell “By gesture, 10 foot radius 10 (Chosen Element)”

While casting you cannot use any skills or abilities besides Armament Skills.

You only need the incantation, no need to say the spell name, the only thing else that’s needed is the spell’s effects. Other’s shouldn’t know what you casted unless they use

Awaken the Third Eye

You are able to move when casting a spell that takes a certain amount of time, however you must maintain the chant until the incantation is complete. You can hold it but you must keep chanting.

When purchasing a spell of any kind you must pay the xp cost of the rank of magic it is found in. Meaning for example that if you want every base Enchanting spell you’ll have to purchase Enchanting 6 times, one for each of the following; Lesser Arcane Harvest, Disenchant, Imbue, Fortify, Arcane Arrows, and Bladed Fury.

Magic effects do not stack with spells of the same name.

If a spell is touch based you have to be in touch distance during the entire cast time.

Celestial Devotions

Blood offerings. Basic to both animal and human sacrifice is the recognition of blood as the sacred life force in man and beast. Through the sacrifice, through the return of the sacred life revealed in the victim, the god lives, and, therefore, man and nature live.

With that in mind all the spells in celestial magics cost the health of the practitioner rather than Aura, this is taken from your max health. As such the health sacrificed cannot be healed for an Hour after the most recent use of a Celestial Devotions. Health is expended at the start of casting a spell. If someone spends down to 0 they are able to exist in Stable condition but cannot be healed above that.

Something to also remember about Celestial Devotions is that it is not inspired by any western religion. And the abilities are working because you are beseeching a god to help, not from your own abilities or magic.

Celestial Devotions cannot be performed on Corrupted ground.

If you use the spell Clone and then use Celestial Devotions the usage carries over to your normal health pool reducing your maximum health for an hour.

Anyone that is magically inclined can cast ritual magic, and unless specifically stated on the schematic will not require a certain type of magic level or school needed to cast the ritual. All other requirements, descriptions and effects will be listed on the schematic like any other schematic item in the game. (As a reminder Elves may count as 2 participants)

Runes may only be inscribed on items when the item is being created. The Rune Schematic will dictate the skills, materials, aura, and time needed to inscribe the rune. Once the item has been inscribed with a rune, the item cannot be further altered with new runes. Spells with effects that do not last longer than one hour may also be used on the item. Runes, even across multiple items, do not stack their abilities, meaning that a player cannot benefit from multiple instances of the same Rune. Factions can be joined upon character creation by taking the Faction Member advantage located in the advantages and disadvantages of the book.

Factions can be left in character, discuss this with the Faction writer.

Factions can be joined in character, discuss this with the Faction writer.

Currently the factions have a tentative truce but they still work to subvert each other in any way except for violence.

Section 4

Section 4 is the culmination of international interests in the supernatural and anomalous. The organization is a globe spanning group created in the United States in the late 1800s to investigate magical and paranormal activity and assess/coordinate a proper response, these sites that are investigated are known as RAs or Reality Anomalies. Despite their unaffiliated nature they are reluctantly entrusted by governments all over the world in dealing with these supernatural events. While they are needed due to their expertise Section 4 is not well liked by any government body.

Reality Anomalies, also known simply as RAs, are a classification made by Section 4 to document surreal events arcane and/or scientific in nature. These events are further categorized by the danger and long-lasting impact of said event. These are as follows; Foxtrot, an event that threatened an individual or small group. Echo, an event that threatened a town. Delta, an event that threatened a large area such as a province, state, or small country. Charlie, an event that threatens a large country or continent. Bravo, an event that threatens the world. Alpha, an event that threatens reality.

Section 4's headquarters is known as "The Sphere". The Sphere seems to be a doorway into another dimension accessed by entering the janitor's closet of an office building in Washington DC. This dimension was empty besides an all encompassing pure white light when initially discovered. The first entry team discovered that the area responds to material desires. Now the Sphere is a massive labyrinth of offices, laboratories, guard posts, and a prison at the very center. It's in this location that the most top secret of Section 4's projects take place and where its most dangerous prisoners and monsters are located. The origins of this location are still unknown.

Any Magic-user working for Section 4 is referred to as a Warlock. The administration of the organization is divided between two interest groups: the Valiant Group and the Delta Group.

Section 4 as a whole is led by Director Simon Bardin.

The important note regarding Stitches and Section 4

Section 4 does not have a unified answer to Stitches. The Valiant Group advocates for the Stitches self-determination headed by Dr Soto, while the Delta Group, headed by Dr Skinner, keeps Stitches on a tight leash and seeks to document all peoples with any form of magic ability. Section 4 is divided between these two groups, it is recommended to choose an interest group and note it down.

Subdivisions

AC (Advanced Contact 1-10)

A well-rounded first contact group composed of 10 squads of diplomats, scientists, engineers, with armed escorts. They assess if an entity should be communicated with, eliminated, or captured. They handle the situation if communication is an option. Communication is the preferred method of Section 4. AC 3 is deployed to Gloom Hollow

SRF (Supernatural Response Force)

A fast-acting security force trained to take on high-risk paranormal threats. These units often employ combat Warlocks and Stitches trained for combat. After an initial assessment is provided by an AC team the SRF moves in if the entity is to be eliminated or captured.

Paranormal Research Division

This specially trained group is trusted to investigate Reality Anomalies and events/entities that may be connected to magic or the paranormal. This is the group that originally created Stitches under the supervision of Doctor Soto, current head of the Division. They aren't the only ones who make them as the Meridian Corporation does as well.

Cypher Operatives

The deep cover agents of Section 4, these people have sacrificed their names and former lives to secure the peace of the world. Cypher operatives are not referred to by names, instead they are known as Cypher followed by their designated number. These agents are expected to carry out the most daunting tasks and then disappear without a trace. The head of the Cypher Operatives is code named, Prometheus.

Choose this faction if: You'd like to be part of a paranormal agency that deals with supernatural encounters. If you enjoy morally gray choices that emphasize the good of the many over the needs of a few.

Section 4's thoughts on other factions

- The Circle: Idealists with good intentions, and dangerous reach. Their dedication to magical ethics is admirable, but their openness could jeopardize global stability. We monitor them closely and cooperate when necessary, but if they ever lose control of what they're playing with, we will be there to clean it up.
- The Chevalier: Their effectiveness varies too wildly. Their Old Guard are more than a match for most of our agents, but others are woefully inept. Hire them when the need arises but do not trust their zealous monster slaying ways, the creatures they kill could instead be put to a scientific use.
- The Meridian Corporation: Section 4 and Meridian have a mutual understanding, We cooperate but maintain our secrets.
- The Brimstone Assembly: Radicals interested in changing the status quo even when it would not be wise to do so. They dream of a bright future while not concerning themselves with the present.
- The Hollow Society: They are irrelevant to the grand scheme of things. Interesting newspaper though.

The Circle

Founded in 2025 The Circle is an independent arcane college, founded not to control magic, but to understand and restore it. Equal parts research institute, archive, and field recovery organization, the Circle views the world in its lost truths, scattered across centuries, buried in ruins, or twisted into tools by those seeking power. Their mission is threefold: preserve arcane history, spread knowledge, and return displaced artifacts to their rightful stewards.

They are scholars, teachers, adventurers, diplomats, and, when necessary, thieves returning that which was stolen. While others steal for power, the Circle reclaims in the name of memory, culture, and morality. Artifacts belong to the cultures that made them, the Circle catalogues but does not hoard.

The Arcanum is their base of operations and functions as a school and vault. Even though the Circle strives to return what they find, artifacts are sometimes donated to the organization. These are used by their agents in the field.

Subdivisions

- The Novitiates: Newly joined students with limitless potential. Here they learn magic theory, history, and ethics of arcane recovery. After some time in general education Novitiates are often paired with a member from the other subdivisions that acts as their guide and teacher.
- The Seekers: The Seekers are adventurers, researchers, and magical archaeologists who travel across the globe in pursuit of ancient artifacts, lost relics, and long-forgotten magical sites. They chart ruins, translate texts, and brave the unknown in the name of history.
- The Reclaimers: When artifacts fall into the hands of tyrants, warlords, corporations, or unethical collectors, the Reclaimers step in. These operatives use stealth, strategy, and occasionally magic-fueled sabotage to steal back what was stolen and return it to the rightful people or cultures.
- The Curators: Based in the depths of the Arcanum itself, the Curators are tasked with cataloging, identifying, and studying the objects and knowledge recovered by the other subdivisions. Some work in vast enchanted vaults, others in sprawling archives or sealed reliquaries, ensuring every piece of magic is understood and preserved.
- The Magisters: The Magisters are the scholars and magi who teach at the Arcanum. They specialize in various disciplines, from practical spellcasting to artifact lore, magical ethics, and more. Many are retired Seekers, Reclaimers, or Curators passing their wisdom on to the next generation.
- The High-Lectors: The High-Lectors form the ruling council beneath the Ordermaster, tasked with overseeing the day-to-day function of The Circle. Each High-Lector leads a major division, Field Recovery, Arcane Instruction, Cataloguing, Reclamation, and Initiation.

- The Ordermaster: Chosen by consensus of the High-Lectors through a secretive Rite of Binding, the Ordermaster holds ultimate authority over all Circle matters, including foreign diplomacy, forbidden magic, and artifact triage.

Choose this faction if:

- You want to explore lost ruins, recover stolen relics, or catalog forgotten spells.
 - You believe knowledge should be protected and shared, not hoarded.
- You want to play a scholar, rogue archaeologist, or magical archivist with a moral compass.

The Circle's thoughts on other factions

Section 4: Their work is occasionally aligned with ours, but secrecy can breed mistrust.

The Chevalier: Brave, but too quick to burn what they do not understand.

The Meridian Corporation: A careful eye must be kept on them so they do not pillage what we protect.

The Brimstone Assembly: Idealists with good hearts, though sometimes reckless.

The Hollow Society: Fellow knowledge seekers, we hope they can comprehend the truths they unearth.

The Chevalier: (Shuh-Val-Yey)

A secretive tight knit group dedicated to protecting the common person from paranormal creatures. They travel from place to place investigating possible monster related events and disposing of any creatures they find. They are distrustful of magic but know that it is sometimes necessary.

Subdivisions

Witness

An affiliate of The Chevalier, people living normal lives but have knowledge of the supernatural. These people act as informants, feeding the Chevalier local information.

Squire

Fresh recruits, usually the result of being born into the life or being recruited after a family member's death at the hands of a monster.

Knight

Full fledged members, they have been initiated and entrusted with the group's secrets.

Ranger

A rare sedentary Knight that guards a specific area, usually protecting something or someone important or keeping an eye on a long term threat.

Apostle of the Sun

When a knight has served with distinction and their trust is beyond reproach they are allowed to take the Sacrament of the Dawn. If successful they find themselves even more effective in their fight against the beasts that haunt our planet.

The Old Guard

A group made up of elder members who have accepted that their time to die is fast approaching. They are usually sent on missions deemed suicidal or of an unknown threat level, such as an Elder Ekimmu or pack of Barghest.

Vidame (Vee-dam)

The leader of a region, promoted from a long standing Knight, Ranger, or Apostle that has demonstrated leadership qualities. This person oversees all operations in their area; hunts, information gathering, supplies, etc. If a creature is deemed to be too dangerous for a knight/warden or a group of knights/wardens to handle, the Vidame has the power to call a Wild Hunt, bringing the full regional force of the Chevalier to bear on the target.

Solaris

Leader of the entire organization. There is no current Solaris after the passing of Stavros.

Choose this faction if:

- You want to be a professional monster hunter operating on the edge of society with a close network of contacts, cohorts, and friends.
- You believe sacrifices are necessary to fight monsters, mostly yours but at times other's.

The Chevalier's thoughts on other factions

- Section 4: Work with them when we have to but don't trust them
- The Circle: Of all the magic-wielding groups, they're the only ones trying to do right by the world. We don't trust magic, but we trust the people who hold themselves accountable, and The Circle does. If they keep their word and don't hoard power, we'll tolerate their presence. Maybe even respect them. But if they ever forget who they serve, it won't be the first time we've put down a wayward cabal.
- The Meridian Corporation: A well run organization that supplies incredible health products. They have some of the brightest minds in the world at their disposal. Possibly our best hope for the future.
- The Brimstone Assembly: Who are they really? Some may be trustworthy, others not so much. Judge on an individual basis.
 - The Hollow Society: Common man fighting against the uncommon foe. Their information is good but they are usually out of their depth. Skilled individuals may be promising recruits.

The Meridian Corporation

The world's largest genetics company, they are interested to see if any discoveries in Gloom Hollow could help further the field of genetic engineering and perhaps turn a tidy profit doing so.

They are solely motivated by genetic advancements and the money that comes with it. They function as their own "family", doing everything from fieldwork to market placement in house.

Subdivisions

The Bleeding Edge Mechanicum

Machines are the future! While being a part of the Meridian Corporation family the Bleeding Edge specializes in turning the genetic advancements that are made into technological ones. With all the interesting happenings in Gloom Hollow is Subdivision has turned their eyes on to the small town in hopes to gain something new that will push them closer to their final goal.

Creation Prime

This section of the Meridian Corporation focuses on the advancement of the human form.

Through advancements in medicine and science we look to make all humans in the Meridian family the strongest and the best they can. Many naturally occurring outcrops in Gloom Hollow have led to several breakthroughs inside the division making it normal to see a Creation Prime member walking the streets of the small town.

The Cleaners

An elite acquisition division who have been trained to acquire what the Corporation needs and then to vanish without any evidence that they were there. Including but not limited to the killing of all witnesses and destruction of sensitive information.

Choose this faction if:

- You want to work for a shadowy morally ambiguous corporation, with a good public image, who captures the supernatural for monetary and scientific gain.
- You want to be at the forefront of discovery but don't need those pesky ethical concerns getting in the way.
- You want to work for said corporation but your poor character doesn't realize their employer's true darker intentions.

The Meridian Corporation's thoughts on other factions

- Section 4: Our friendship is beneficial to both sides, let's keep it that way.
- The Circle: A group with lofty ideals but limited practicality. Their preservationist agenda is admirable, but it often gets in the way of progress. But, they do have access to some valuable artifacts, and their knowledge of ancient magic could be beneficial if we can find ways to cooperate.

- The Chevalier: An easily manipulated group. Get them to do the hard work for the good of the common man, they will jump to do so.
- The Brimstone Assembly: They are a thorn in our side, bleeding hearts who will let perfectly good opportunities go to waste.
 - The Hollow Society: Their snooping into our activities has been noted.

The Brimstone Assembly

The Brimstone Assembly is an iconoclast conglomeration of mage cells and allies who are united in the belief that controlling and tracking those with magic is morally reprehensible.

The focus of a Brimstone cell can vary wildly. Some are bent on revolution or actively fighting to change the status quo, others may focus on preserving magical knowledge or creating isolated communities to keep mages safe.

Subdivisions

Order of the Burning Star

They believe that to talk is cheap, and they should bring the fight to anyone who attempts to control magic. They run counter spy rings, often warning mages when a group is attempting to control them. At times when great injustice occurs, they arrive to support the victims, holding back or letting loose depending on what those people need.

Magipunk Society

These cells see magic as a great equalizer, a new ability that can bring humankind into a never-before-seen Golden Age. Members devote their time to figuring out new ways to adapt magic to improve people's lives, such as magi-tech. One of their main goals is figuring out a way to awaken magic in everyone.

Nightingales

Revolutions are multi-faceted, and no one knows this better than the Nightingales, who specialize in less...confrontational tactics. Whether that means covertly disseminating propaganda, running soup kitchens, or patching up battle survivors and making sure the fighting forces are well-supplied. The Nightingales' support network is offered to any movement within Brimstone.

Choose this faction if:

- You want to fight the power.
- Enjoy playing underdog factions that try to do good no matter the cost to themselves.

The Brimstone Assembly's thoughts on other factions

- Section 4: We will reveal their lies, the people will know soon enough.
- The Circle: A group dedicated to preserving knowledge and understanding the magical world, a rare quality in today's chaotic times. Their dedication to recovering lost artifacts and preserving history is admirable. They believe in the value of cultural heritage and magic, which aligns with our own desire for freedom and empowerment.

- The Chevalier: Brutes who prefer to meet every situation the same way, with extreme violence. But sometimes cooperation is necessary.
- The Meridian Corporation: Infiltration of their inner workings have been unsuccessful, but they have to be up to no good.
 - The Hollow Society: Potential allies, we just have to guide them.

The Hollow Society

Gloom Hollow is full of secrets and cover ups. It is The Hollow Society job to uncover all that is being hidden from us! We are an elite collection of the best cryptid and extraterrestrial hunters that Gloom Hollow has to offer. If you are looking to get to the bottom of the mysteries here, we are the social group for you!

Subdivisions

Paragon Paranoia:

A group within the Hollow Society that focuses on the Cryptids they know are living in the surrounding area. They may not have the best photos or videos, but they are happy to bring on new cryptid hunters.

S.E.A.N.C.E:

When cold spots and creaking doors give way to poltergeists and possessions the Hollow Society calls on the Spirit Examination and Containment Experts also known as S.E.A.N.C.E. These fearless individuals investigate in the dead of night and seek to make contact with those on the other side.

The Shadow Sleuths:

Things always seem to be a little bit off here in Gloom Hollow, these people will stick their noses anywhere. If there's a mystery they will investigate. They may not be the best investigators, or the best equipped but they try it their best!

Choose this faction if:

- You can't seem to stop meddling
 - You're a snooper
- You want to play an everyman in over their head.

The Hollow Society's thoughts on other factions

- Section 4: They coverup everything they touch, it's time their operations are brought to light.
- The Circle: There's no denying that The Circle's pursuit of knowledge is impressive. They believe in unearthing lost truths, which resonates with our own quest to uncover the secrets lurking beneath the surface of Gloom Hollow.
 - The Chevalier: Valiant protectors of the common people.
- The Brimstone Assembly: Some of their exploits make good news, classic underdog story. Although they may be a bit too radical for our taste.

- The Meridian Corporation: Getting the scoop on them would be the story of the century

The Houses of the Gods

These Houses aren't meant to encourage CvC, as always CvC should be discussed and agreed upon beforehand.

In the world of Gloom Hollow, the Mexica gods are not just myths, they are real, active forces shaping the land, the skies, and the lives of those who honor them. Their Houses are more than just faiths; they are ways of life, philosophies, and power structures with their own goals, tensions, and worldviews.

Joining a House is a chance to explore a rich, immersive character identity that goes beyond class or species. Each House encourages a different style of play, personal expression, and roleplay, tied deeply into the divine of the setting.

The House of Night

Alternate Names: The House of the North

Leader Deity: Tezcatlipoca, the Smoking Mirror

Minor Deities: Citlalicue (Goddess of the Stars), Citlalattonac (God of the Stars), Huehucocoyotl (Old Coyote) and many more

Core Themes

- Ambition and Rivalry: The House of Night thrives on competition, innovation, and personal excellence. Members are expected to push boundaries of what's possible and constantly prove their worth, not just to their gods, but to each other.
- Cunning Over Brutality: The Night teaches that strategy and subterfuge are purer forms of power than brute force. The clever outlast the strong. Intrigue and insight are the favored weapons.
- The Sacred Mirror: The obsidian mirror is both a literal and symbolic touchstone of the House. It represents reflection, judgment, and the duality of self. Every action is a step closer or away from one's truest form.

Beliefs and Philosophy

- Strength through Struggle: Only through hardship can true power emerge. Members are encouraged to face their flaws head-on,
- There Is No Coincidence, Only Design: To a follower of the Night, nothing is random. Everything that happens, every loss, betrayal, and triumph, is part of the god's intricate weaving. There is a reason for it.
- The Game of Shadows: Life is a game, one of strategy, leverage, and social maneuvering. Everyone plays, whether they realize it or not.

Practices and Rituals

- The Mirror Rite: A private, silent ritual of self-reflection. Practitioners sit before a polished obsidian mirror and attempt to "converse" with the hidden parts of themselves, sometimes literally, sometimes metaphorically.
- The Ixiptlatli: this translates to, the Impersonator. The Ixiptlatli is chosen during the festival of Tepopochtli once a year. They are treated with great reverence and are not only considered the leader of the local House of Night supplicants but instruments of Tezcatlipoca's will made manifest. Each Ixiptlatli is given one of the 360 epithets of Tezcatlipoca, their title to carry. This is in the month of July.

Alternate Names: The House of the West

Leader Deity: Quetzalcoatl, the Feathered Serpent

Minor Deities: Chalchiuhtlicue (She of the Jade Skirt), Tlahuizcalpantecuhtli (The Lord of the Dawn), and many more

Core Themes

- Enlightenment through Knowledge: The pursuit of understanding is the holiest act. House of Day sees ignorance as the root of all suffering and strives to lift the veil from the world's secrets, no matter how painful the truth may be.
- Illumination Over Ignorance: Light banishes confusion. The House of Day seeks to enlighten the world, through scholarship and teaching.
- Discovery as Devotion: Every breakthrough, scientific, spiritual, or personal, is an offering to Quetzalcoatl. Inquiry is sacred, and study is a form of prayer.
- Hope as Rebellion: In a world like Gloom Hollow, the House of Day believes that hope itself is radical. They carry the light not because they are naïve, but because they refuse to let the Void win.

Beliefs and Philosophy

- Truth is a divine force: To seek it is to walk with the gods.
- Nothing is beyond understanding, eventually: Mystery is only a delay of discovery.
- The gods gave us logic for a reason: Blind faith is not faith at all.

Practices and Rituals

- The Seeking: Supplicants choose a topic they do not understand and dedicate time to researching, discussing, or confronting it. This may include studying texts, engaging in debate, or meditating on moral dilemmas.
- The Rite of Illumination: A ritual of confession, not of sins, but of ignorance. Members speak aloud something they've been wrong about or something they don't yet understand. The community responds with guidance, resources, or encouragement, not shame.

The House of Growth

Alternate Names: The House of the East

Leader Deity: Xipe Totec, the Flayed God

Minor Deities: Centeotl (God of Maize), Xilonen (Doll Made of Corn), Chicomecoatl (Goddess of Nourishment), and many more

Core Themes

- Transformation: True growth comes from change, often painful, always necessary.
- Resilience: Scars are sacred. Wounds that heal become our armor.
- Community First: The health of the many sustains the individual.
- Cycle Awareness: Life, death, decay, and rebirth are all part of the same sacred process.

Beliefs and Philosophy

- Suffering is Sacred: Pain is not punishment, it is the pressure that creates strength. All must be willing to shed parts of themselves (habits, pride, even comfort) to grow.
- No One Grows Alone: Individual growth must contribute to the betterment of the community. Selfishness is stagnation.
- Death Feeds Life: Rotting things nourish the soil. Endings make beginnings possible.
- Flaying as Metaphor: Like their god, followers believe in peeling back the outer layers, of the self, of illusions, of societal masks, to reveal truth beneath.

Practices and Rituals

- The Shedding: A seasonal ritual where members publicly symbolically “shed” something, a belief, a burden, a secret, to mark personal progress.
- Communal Tending: Members gather to clean, heal, and rebuild spaces or lives in need. The work is considered sacred.
- Sacred Scarification: Scarring (Physical or symbolic) may be practiced to honor a hard-won change.
- The First Step: A daily act to commit to growth no matter how small.

Symbols

The House of War

Alternate Names: The House of the South

Leader Deity: Huitzilopochtli, the Hummingbird of the Left

Minor Deities: Tonatiuh (Sun God), Chantico (Goddess of the Hearth), Coyolxauhqui (Painted with Bells), and many more

Core Themes

- Discipline: Chaos breeds weakness. Victory begins with self-control.
- Sacrifice: Greatness requires loss. Glory demands blood.
- Honor & Action: Deeds matter more than words.
- Excellence: Just as one hones a sword for battle you should strive to excel in everything you do

Beliefs and Philosophy

- Magic is a Crutch: Power must be earned through sweat, pain, and fire, not conjured with ease.
- The Sun Must Be Fed: Battle sustains the world. Sacrifice fuels the sun, literally and metaphorically.
- To Fight Is to Live: Every conflict, external or internal, brings a chance for rebirth and is the essence of life.
- Victory is Purification: War burns away weakness.
- The Power of Self: The House of War encourages power to come from the within rather than from an external source.

Practices and Rituals

- The Vigil of Fire: Before a major mission or war, the House builds a fire and gathers around it. One by one, warriors step forward to cast something into the flames, a lock of hair, a piece of armor, a symbol of fear. They do this while stating what they are willing to sacrifice for victory.
- The Tablet of the Fallen: Deceased members are not mourned, they are honored. Their names are carved into a sacred tablet. During this supplicants of the house chant the name three times while striking weapons together. Some members choose to carry these tablets into battle, as a sign they fight not just for themselves but all who came before.
- Blood Oath: Two or more members swear an oath, of loyalty, vengeance, or cause, by cutting their palms and mingling blood over a shared weapon. That weapon becomes a sacred symbol of the pact.

Symbols

Motto

“Your Strength Alone”

The House of the Heavens

Alternate Names: The House of the Above

Leader Deity: Tlaloc, He Who Makes Things Sprout

Minor Deities: Mixcoatl (The Cloud Serpent), Ehecatl (God of the Wind), Huixtocihuatl (Goddess of Salt Water), Meztli (Moon Deity), and many more

Core Themes

- Tenacity: No flood lasts forever. No drought does either. Survive. Adapt. Overcome.
- Persistence: Erosion shows us that overtime even the strongest of obstacles can be destroyed.
- Cycles of Renewal: What falls to the depths will rise again, as rain returns to the heavens.

Beliefs and Philosophy

- Descent is the First Step of Ascent: Only what sinks can rise. Don't fear the fall, through trial is how you find who are you.
- Endurance is the Greatest Strength: For the House of Heavens, survival is victory. Where other Houses glorify conquest, knowledge, or glory, the Heavens teach that persistence outlasts all things.
- Sacrifice Nourishes the World: The House of Heavens believes deeply in the necessity of offering something precious to receive change in return. Just as the earth must drink rain to yield crops, so too must individuals give of themselves; time, blood, love, or even their own pride, to bring about prosperity.
- Heavens are Both Fierce and Gentle: The duality of water is at the core of their philosophy: soft enough to carve stone, gentle enough to nurture, and fierce enough to sweep away cities. Members of the House of Heavens aspire to this balance, merciful when possible and destructive when necessary.

Practices and Rituals

- The Echo Rite: Practiced in flooded ruins or echoing chambers. The supplicant whispers questions into a water-filled bowl, listens to the ripples and echoes, and fasts while sleeping beside it. Dreams that night are considered messages from Tlaloc.
- Feast of the First Rain: On the first rainfall after the dry season, the House gathers on damp earth, eats food, sings, and blesses the soil.

Innovation

Requires: Library

Aura: Per use of Study

Someone needs to think of the future, this skill will allow you to engage in the process of discovering and creating new technology. The first step is to discuss an innovation as a group and spend time researching the subject, via "Study" with an Expertise applicable to your idea (spend one game doing this). You will then need to put what you've learned to paper, create a detailed writeup of your idea including proposed components and effects of your invention then submit it to the faction storyteller, (this should be submitted no later than 1 week after the study session was completed). There will be a back and forth about possible modifications to the components or effects (this can take another 1-2 months). Not all submissions will be approved. When approved you will receive a single-use uncopyable Schematic to build a prototype of your invention. This prototype will need to be field tested for three months during which it may be subjected to malfunctions and errors. At the end of the three months you will receive a single fully functional product and one blueprint that can then be copied by anyone with the Scribe skill. Items invented cannot be used to circumvent Advantages or Disadvantages nor to gain Skills. A faction may only have one Innovation project going on at a time. A faction may complete one project every 6 months.

Summary of Steps:

1. Discuss Idea-Perform Study (Month 1)
 - a. Submit idea and write up to Fraction Storyteller
2. Refine Idea for Prototype with Storyteller (Estimated 1-2 months)
3. Upon Approval, Test Prototype (3 months)
4. Receive Final Schematic and (1) functional product

Imagination

Requires: Library

Aura: Per use of Study

Someone needs to dream of the future, this skill will allow you to engage in the process of discovering and creating new magical spells, rituals, or runes. The first step is to discuss an imagination idea as a group and spend time researching the Magic school of your choice, via “Study” (spend one game doing this). You will then need to put what you’ve learned to paper, create a detailed writeup of your idea including proposed casting times, aura cost and effects of your spell then submit it to the faction storyteller, (this should be submitted no later than 1 week after the study session was completed). There will be a back and forth about possible modifications to the cost or effects (this should take another 1-2 months). Not all submissions will be approved. When approved you will receive (3) prototype spell scrolls to test the new spell. Requirements to use each spell scroll will be written on the prototype schematic. This prototype will need to be field tested for three months during which it may be subjected to miscasts and errors. At the end of the three months you will receive one spell tome that can be used to learn and teach the spell. A faction may only have one Imagination project going on at a time. A faction may complete one project every 6 months.

Summary of Steps:

1. Discuss Idea-Perform Study (Month 1)
 - a. Submit idea and write up to Fraction Storyteller
2. Refine Idea for Scroll Prototype with Storyteller (Estimated 1-2 months)
3. Upon Approval, Test Prototype (3 months)
4. Receive Final Spell Tome

Reverse Engineering

These steps will proceed as follows.

- First Month, Bring the idea to the Writer of your faction. This will give them time to write out and devise the schematic and work with any other writer that may be involved with the specific item.
- Second Month, This is the Study Phase, someone within the faction will have to study the item, with any appropriate expertises as requested by the Writer of the faction.
- Third Month, This is the Prototype phase, this phase lasts until the following happens; upon receiving the schematic of the item; a prototype must then be made and used and playtested within the game space. Though this phase is generally expected to only take a month, it will last as long as it takes to get the prototype built and used.
- There will then be a “cool down” month in which no other Reverse Engineering project can be started between items. This is also when you will receive the finalized Schematic of the item.

Reverse Engineering Runes

Requires: Lab

- A Study action is performed with at least one player with the skill Scribe, and at least one player capable of crafting runes (A player with Enchanting magic or a crafter with Expertise Enchanting). The player with the Scribe Skill must also have Magically Inclined or Expertise: Magic. This Study action must be performed for each Rune on the item you wish to make into a Schematic.
- A set of Enchanted Ink and Paper for each Rune on the item you wish to make into a Schematic.
- This destroys the item being researched.

Innovation/Imagination Without a Faction

If you wish to use these mechanics without being a member of a Faction we have a solution for you. What you will need to do is gather at least 6 unaffiliated players together, the six (or more) of you can then hire an NPC for horn to help with your project. Designate a point of contact who will be communicating with the NPC during development. Everything else will proceed as normal with how long it will take and that you can only complete one project every 6 months.

You cannot be a part of multiple projects.

Summary of Steps:

1. Discuss Idea-Perform Study (Month 1)
 - a. Submit idea to the storytellers via the Study submission sheet
- 2.
3. Refine Idea for Prototype with Storytellers (Estimated 1 months)
4. Upon Approval, Test Prototype (3 months)
5. Receive respective final product:

- a. Receive Final Schematic and (1) functional product
- b. Receive Final Spell Tome

AI Viruses

Vanguard Virus: When used on an AI player, this hack causes a reduction of their current max health by -3HP until resolved.

Overload: When used on an AI player, this hack causes any shock damage to also stun the AI for 2 seconds

Resurrection

All PCs and NPCs can only be the target of any spell, skill, ability or item that prevents soul loss upon death once per every 12s. This includes all resurrections. Defy Destiny is in a separate category and can also only effect a PC once per 12s as well. Some AC skills and the Green Horn Prevent soul loss ring will be the exception to the rule. These will be listed under their descriptions.

THIS GOES INTO EFFECT NOVEMBER 2025

Death and Gloom

Unfortunately not every character can be saved from death and when that moment comes many things can happen in the world of Gloom Hollow.

Upon death, your body will be “saveable” for 5 minutes. During this time those who can revive you can do so if they so wish. Your body will remain on the ground for an additional 5 minutes

After that 10 minute timer, your soul will be taken by the Gloom. You can now get up, place your hand on your head and go to NPC as your body seems to fade out of existence. You will be given a death scene and given you a Gloom Effect. This will affect both your RP and your Spirit stat for 6 hours, a -1 spirit for each Gloom, this minus 1 spirit doesn't affect your soul count. Once that time is up you can seek aid in removing the affliction. Spirit is lowered by one for each Gloom you possess. If soul loss is prevented in any way when you die you will not see a god during your death scene.

Permanent Death

Once you lose all of your soul from dying your character is considered to have died a permanent death. Once this happens you will be given a final death scene and you'll be sent out as a Shadow Mirror Curse version of your character to wreak havoc on the town, this is referred to as a “Perm Fight”.

But what happens to all of the xp you've gathered? Not to worry, you don't lose it. Instead all of your xp minus your starting 16 is added to a pool. When you make a new character in that slot you will receive 6 from this pool every game until you have caught all the way up. This ensures that your money doesn't go to waste.

Gloom Effects

See, Speak, and Hear no more: Something that you saw, heard, or spoke to you left a lasting scar that not even the Gloom could shake off. Lose the ability to Speak, See or Hear (at ST's discretion).

Aura Blocked: You cannot regen any aura at the 12's or 6's.

Amnesia: Going through the Gloom can take a lot out of you. Your mind and memories are often the last things returned to you. Lose your memories of who you are and where. You can act however friendly or paranoid as you want during this time. You still have the ability to use any of the skills your character has, you just may not know why.

Always on the Run (Nagual Only): Something about your death triggers the fight or flight instinct of the Voidborn within you. You may only stay in a fight if you and your allies outnumber the opponents, as soon as there are more enemies you will do everything in your power to run from the fight. (this overrides Bloodrage).

Bloodthirsty (Werebeast Only): Your experience through the Gloom has triggered something primal within you. When in combat when you see an enemy enter bleed-out you have an overwhelming urge to end their life. You will do everything in your power to enact a Deathblow on them, and you savor the act, it takes 3 more seconds before you can declare the damage.

By a Thread (Stitch only): The Gloom didn't really know what to do with you, but you came back in one piece, sorta. You will need to get your stitches touched up a few more times. Have your Stitches repaired once every 3 hours (4 times) within the 12 hours. This Affliction fixes itself after 12 hours.

Crawling out of the Grave (Human Only): Some how your death has been influenced by the Tamoanchan curse. You may only communicate in Clicks like Crawlers, This cures itself after 12 hours.

Dead Man's Curse: Something hitched a ride with you while you were passing through the gloom. you have an insatiable lust for fresh meat be it friend or foe. Once per 12s you are unable to stop yourself from eating the flesh of any downed species friend or foe. If you are unable to, you become irritable. This consumption is non mechanical and does nothing to how the body can be interacted with. Can't be cured until the game after affliction.

Elemental Infusion (Elf Only): You lose the immunity from your elemental attunement ability until this is cured.

Hermit: With everything that has happened to you maybe it's better to avoid the busy streets of Gloom Hollow. You now find yourself happy to spend time alone away from other town folk. The Monsters in the woods are happy you do as well. While afflicted you will avoid large groups and gatherings. If it's important (to you or your pc) to attend a large gathering you will stick to the sides or hang back a bit.

My Only Friend: Nothing you seem to do can shake the feeling of the Gloom from you. You have exhausted every method you can think of, well all but one. Something that you have found helps, Gain the Addiction disadvantage until cured.

Pantheon's Ire: Something you did pissed off the gods, you can not benefit from the Devotions of one of the Houses (ST discretion), not only that you can not be the target of spells or abilities that will stop you from passing through the gloom, the next time you die.

Pompous Asshole(Hematophage Only): You think your shit doesn't stink. Upon returning from the Gloom you will flaunt the things you own. If purchasing something you will pay 5 horn more than asked. And you will make sure EVERYONE knows how important you are.

Hollowed Return: For some reason your connection to what is real and what isn't is even more tenuous, and your spiritual connection to things seems to be fueling it. Any time you gain Hollow you gain +1 to that amount for every two spirit you have.

Ironskin: The Gloom was kind to you, or so you think. In death, you now feel stronger than ever and don't think that you need your armor or the aid of a doctor, even when you are hanging on by a hair. While afflicted you will not wear armor, want a protection spell, or seek out medical aid.

Shadow-Touched: You aren't sure why but the things that go bump in the night seem friendly or to even be possible allies. You will look at Shadow Mirror Cursed creatures as friends and allies for the purposes of your skills. Even if attacked by them.

Shattered Masque(Fae Only): Your experience coming through the gloom has disrupted your ability to regenerate your Chitin, if your natural armor is reduced to 0 you must get it maintained like normal armor. This cures itself after 12 hours.

Slipped Through My Fingers(A.I. Only): Your abilities have been short circuited as you travelled through the Gloom. When wielding items in your hand you feel clunky and clumsy, all martial and defensive skills that use a weapon are at +2 aura to use. This cures itself after 12 hours.

Solo Lifter(Drudge Only): Something has changed the way you view your other drudge when you passed through the gloom. You view them with paranoia and suspicion (they obviously work for the demons), you will avoid being in close proximity(within 10 feet) to any other drudge until this Gloom Affliction is Cured.

Surface Tension(Xolopod Only): Your time on land has only been trouble. After returning from the gloom you are paranoid having to deal with anything surface world. Any skills that would influence the surface world take 2 more aura to use. (Example, crafting, gathering (not aquatic items), etc.) This does not include using magic.

To Be or Not to Be: You can't seem to settle on a feeling and when you try to focus it just seems to sway even more. During your death scene, your ST will pick an emotion to be focused on. This Affliction Fixes itself after 12 hours.

Voices in the Dark: {Only active when dark out or in a dark space} Something is calling to you. You don't know what it is and it doesn't bother you that no one else can hear it. What you do know is that you need to find it, go to it, be one with it. At your discretion, your PC can act as spaced out, tranquil, paranoid, etc about what is calling you. You will wander off on your own, looking for whoever is calling out your name, staff may act as this voice if they are out and come across you while afflicted.

Custom: A custom Gloom that is discussed and created by you ST at the time of your death scene.

Hollow meter guide

How it Works

- Your Hollow meter acts as a sanity meter. The more you gain the more your character slowly loses their grip on reality.
- The meter is numbered 1-20. 20 is the max a player can have before Gloom and possible afflictions are added. Any Hollowing Effect above 20 will result in Gloom and afflictions. If a player hits 40 on their Hollow meter it will immediately cause an unsaveable death.
- Players with Resurrection spells can at the same cost of the spell take the entire total of another person's Hollow meter upon themselves once per 12s; this uses up your once per 12s use of Revive. Any point over 20 will result in Gloom, Affliction, or Death. Should the player use the Resurrection spell to hit a total that causes death, they cannot be saved. They will see god and all that entails. If a player hits 40 on their Hollow meter it will immediately cause an unsaveable death.
- Players with the Therapy skill can reduce Hollow equal to one half of the Therapist's Spirit rounded up, points from another player's Hollow meter after a 5-minute conversation with that player. Rp should be based on what the effect player is seeing and feeling due to the hollowing effect. Players with Therapy may also spend 1 aura and 1 minute looking over another player to learn what that player's Hollow Meter is at.
- Every player is able to gain and lose the Hollow effect. Players within their First Three LIVE games have a stronger resistance than those who have spent time within Gloom Hollow. Twice within the game, a New Player may negate the addition of another Hollow effect on their own meter by stating - "No effect, Shopkeepers Ward". New players may also negate the addition of another Hollow Effect on ANOTHER player's meter by saying "No effect, Shopkeepers Ward" once per game.

- When a player with a High Hollow Effect dies the Hollow meter is reset to 0. Players should expect a worse Gloom Scene.
- Your Hollow Count can be seen on your character sheet in the Gloom Section. Your Hollow count will stay consistent game to game unless you have it removed or you die.

Hollowing Effects

Npcs with a Purple head band are Hollowed Creatures. These npcs can only be seen by players with 5+ Hollow.

1-5	Nothing happens at this stage.
6-10	You start hearing and seeing things that are not there. Shadows dart around, creatures that are not there. Nothing anyone can say to you will convince you that they are just illusions.
11-15	All effects listed above. You can start to see creatures that can see you as well. They may be friendly, they may not be. You don't know if you want to find out. At this point you must wear a purple bracelet to signify to the NPCs that you can be interacted with.
16-20	All effects listed above. They know you exist. They want you to join them.
20-40	All effects listed above. Possible Gloom and/or Afflictions can be given. Once you hit 40 you will immediately drop dead. You are not savable.
